WILLEHAD REPORTED READY

German Liner Has Taken Aboard Provisions and Coal and Is Being Prepared for a Sea Trip

The persistent waterfront rumor that the North German Lloyd Line is grooming its steamer Willehad for a dash to New London, Ct., to serve as tender for the expected U-liner Bremen, gained added punch today when it was learned that the North German Lloyd has been getting draught figures from the Cape Cod canal management.

In the past thirty-six hours the Willehad has been newly coaled, provisioned, loaded with ice and manned with additional crew.

Representatives of the line have called this merely "preserving property." The idea of the Willehad going out of the harbor was ridiculed as exposing the steamer to instant capture by the first handy British warship.

COULD MAKE THE TRIP.

But harbor pilots raised the point that the Willehad could, with only seventeen feet draught, creep along the South Shore to Sandwich within the three-mile limit, negotiate the Cape Cod Canal, then work along through Buzzards Bay and into Long Island Sound to New London without being outside our three-mile limit all the way.

On top of this theory the news came today that the North German Lloyd gave to the canal management the dimensions of two vessels, with inquiry whether either of these could pass through the canal and get around the sunken collier which partially obstructs the canal channel at Bourne.

The canal management responded that the smaller of these two vessels could pass without trouble.

SELECT SMALLEST BOAT.

The Willehad is the smallest of four North German Lloyd steamers which took refuge in this port since the European war began. The others are the Koln, Wittekind and Kronprinzessin Cecelie. The latter, of course, is out of the question for this kind of a dash. It is believed that the two vessels which the line had in mind when it queried the canal officials were the Willehad and one of the two

BEACH STEAMER DISABLED, 1,000 TAKEN OFF

The Nantasket Beach steamer Myles Standish, which left Rowe's Wharf at 12:15 o'clock today for Pemberton and Nantasket, became disabled on the way down and anchored off Castle Island.

The Betty Alden, returning from Nantasket, steamed alongside the disabled steamer and took off a thousand passengers, landing them at Rowe's Wharf at 1:30.

Most of the passengers took another steamer and continued their journey. A few decided that they had had adventure enough.

The accident started a rumor that the Myles Standish was ashore.

LANSING SILENT ON U-BOAT 'ATTACK'

Washington, Aug. 23.—Secretary of State Lansing today refused to discuss a report from Berlin that the American government had sent a note to Germany inquiring about a submarine attack on the American steamer Owego. The secretary would not even admit that such a note had been sent.

The Owego sailed July 19 from New York for Rotterdam, and is reported to have been fired upon by a submarine while passing the Isle of Wight.

ROXBURY BUSINESS MEN AT PEMBERTON

The Roxbury and Roxbury Crossing Boards of Trade held a joint outing today at Pemberton. Three hundred members rode in sixty-three flag and banner-bedecked autos to Pemberton, after a parade through Roxbury streets. The parade was headed by J. R. Vanderwarker, marshal.

DAMAGE MILITARY WORKS IN FLANDERS

Amsterdam, Aug. 23.—German military works at Lichterveldok, Ardoye and Thielt were heavily damaged in the recent air raid of the allies over West Flanders, says the Echo de Belge.

BULGARS DRIVE IN FLANKS OF ALLIES

Salonica, Aug. 23.—Along the great 150-mile battle front in Macedonia, where more than 1,000,000 soldiers are struggling for mastery, terrific fighting is in progress in three separate zones.

The most westerly of these areas of fighting lies southwest of Lake Ostrovo. The central one lies across the Vardar valley from a point south of Lake Doiran to the district southwest of Gievgeli, while the most easterly field of hostilities is north of Kavala, in the region of the Struma valley and Lake Tahinos.

BOTH SIDES GAIN.

Gains have been scored by both sides. On their centre the entente troops are slowly pressing forward, and it is reported that fighting will soon be taking place on Serbian soil, if such is not the case already.

By exerting their greatest pressure on their wings the Bulgarian and the Austro-German forces fighting with them evidently had three objects in view.

1—To manoeuvre into a position to strike at the flanks of the entente army.

2—To prevent the entente forces in southern Albania from joining hands with the allied army in Greece.

3—To prevent the invasion of Bulgarian and Turkish Thrace by way of the Drama-Ruk-Eskije railway.

BULGAR TOLL HEAVY.

The fighting in northern Greece is taking place amid a wilderness of barren mountains, where roads have to be made and where the troops suffer bitterly from the intense heat and lack of water and supplies.

Reductions in Revenue and Unpaid Notes Said to Have Forced Road to Seek Receivership

The bill asking for a receiver for the Boston & Maine Railroad, which was filed by Boyd B. Jones on behalf of the Intercontinental Rubber Company of New York, holders of a Boston & Maine note for $50,000, made its appearance in the United States District Court today.

Mr. Jones upon filing the bill late yesterday afternoon took it away with him in order to further amend it. Today a clerk from his office again filed the bill at the Federal Building.

The bill sets forth the financial condition of the Boston & Maine railroad for a number of years. It then speaks of the big note indebtedness which falls due, August 31, involving $13,000,000. The bill contends the road cannot meet this obligation. It says the road has several extensions of notes.

It also states that during the two fiscal years ending June 30, 1915, the actual running expenses fell behind so that it was necessary to utilize $2,500,000 out of the available assets. Also that $16,000,000 will be needed during the next five years to take care of the necessary improvements.

ACTION NECESSARY.

The bill points out the danger of the road being unable to operate unless something is done at once. The bill says that the road has no ready cash on hand to take care of payments on interchange of freight with other roads. It says that $5,331,000 matures on or before January 1 upon contractual obligations.

It cites that during the past year all the real estate of the Boston & Maine in Massachusetts has been under attachment of $4,000,000 in a suit brought against the company by the Hampden Railroad Company, which

The total Bay State number since the beginning of the outbreak is 277.

A light southwest wind brought the heat in bunches, and in the fifteen minutes following 3 o'clock the thermometer on top of the Federal building registered a jump of four degrees to 83. At the same hour yesterday it was 82.

All who could get away from the city took early trains and boats for the beaches, and it was evident that everybody who didn't have to remain behind on business was up and off before the impending heat began to wilt the collars of the faithful.

CHIEFS ARE SEEKING TIME

Railroad Powers Likely to Yield to President on Main Points; Threat of Federal 8-Hour Law

Washington, Aug. 23—The great financial interests behind the railroads of the country are now reaching a decision whether they will accept the demand of President Wilson to agree to an eight-hour work day at a ten hour wage rate to prevent a general railroad strike.

While they are doing so, the railway presidents now here are sparring for time.

A definite decision hardly will be reached before Friday and may be deferred until early next week. But intimations reaching here from New York and Chicago make it plain that eventually President Wilson will secure recognition of the main points of his demand and the railroads will have laid the foundation for pecuniency in settling wage disputes.

DISCUSS PLAN AT CONFERENCE.

Following today's session of the sub-committee of the railway presidents, which has been authorized to arrange an agreement if possible, the following statement was issued:

"A meeting of the presidents and managers was held this morning and a recess taken until 6 o'clock.

"Chairman Holden stated that the report being circulated that any conclusion had been reached was incorrect."

Legislative means of meeting counter-suggestions by the railroads of the country were discussed by President Wilson today with Senator Newlands of Nevada and Representative Adamson of Georgia, chairmen of the Congressional interstate commerce committees.

FEDERAL LAW THREAT.

On his way to the White House Representative Adamson, chairman of the committee, said:

"I don't know when this dispute will be settled, but I do know that if lowed up today its announcement of Monday about barring persons from "infested" districts. Notices were posted at the Lynn-Nahant line and at the steamboat landings warning all persons that the town had established a quarantine against persons coming from infested districts.

The notices say that all persons coming to Nahant must secure clean bills of health from the proper authorities of the place whence they came.

POSTPONE SCHOOL OPENING.

The Nahant school committee, at the suggestion of the selectmen, has voted to postpone school opening from September 5 to September 18.

Among those who will be forced to secure clean bills of health before returning to Nahant are School Superintendent John W. D. Chester and family, who are at Norwich, Ct.

George B. Martin and John Howard of the board of health of Wareham, in which Onset is located, gave out a statement today tending to allay fears lest the three deaths from infantile paralysis in the Newtown Park section of Onset be the forerunner of an epidemic. The statement is as follows:

"At the present, there is absolutely no cause for alarm or fear of infantile paralysis in the town of Wareham or its suburbs. The quarantine that has been placed on Newtown Park and Maple street will be taken off very soon and the embargo placed on the theatres in regard to children under the age of sixteen years will also be removed."

QUERIES STATE BOARD.

Executive Officer George M. Gifford of the Brockton Board of Health has communicated with the State Health Department regarding the alleged violation of quarantine by Lester G. Flagg, head of the Brockton Ice & Coal Company, who took his family home from Nemasket Park to Brockton in his automobile. The State Department notified Mr. Gifford that it would take up the matter with the Wareham Health Board, with a view to ascertaining if the Warehan officials plan any action against Flagg. The Brockton Health Board has a particularly strict quarantine on the Flagg residence.

The Plymouth Health Board is taking extreme precautions on account of the discovery there of the third case for the state week and the ninth for the Summer. Playgrounds are closed, Children down to Cross Side to Cross street are crashed into the lunch room of the Atlantic Shore railroad ferry station. The car was badly damaged and much of the equipment in the lunch room smashed.

As a result of three deaths from paralysis in Onset, the Brockton health authorities are taking measures to safeguard against the spread of the disease in that city. Brockton is thirty-four miles from Onset. Seventy-five per cent of the Summer residents of Onset and Point Independence come from Brockton.

CHILDREN ARE QUARANTINED.

Since the three deaths at Point Independence, Brockton people Summering along Marion Bay have been returning to their home city.

As the families arrive from Onset word is immediately sent to Executive Officer George M. Gifford of the Brockton Board of Health, and the adults are given instructions as to what rules they must follow and the children under sixteen years of age are placed under a rigid quarantine, which will continue for three weeks.

This rule will play havoc with the plans for the opening of Brockton schools on September 7, and it is possible that the opening may be postponed for a couple of weeks. The time is too short to have the quarantine orders of the health board carried out before school opens, and hundreds of children will thus be unable to go to school.

Stage Benefit to Swell Fund for Plague Victims

New York, Aug. 23.—New York victims in the infantile paralysis epidemic will be gainers by the matinee performance of "Katinka" at the Lyric Theatre, today. The entire proceeds will be turned over to the New York AMERICAN Baby Hospital Fund, where the children will be cared for under the eyes of specialists in the treatment of the disease. Additional matinees will be given.

New subscriptions to the fund amounting to $1,015.59 have been received. This makes a total of $32,-038.19 received to date.

Noted Scientist Finds Blood Serum Cures Intantile Paralysis

By PROF. ARNOLD NETTER,
Leading European Authority on Infantile Paralysis.

By International News Service.

Paris, Aug. 22.—The American poliomyelitis epidemic is not surprising, because the heat favors the spread of germs of diseases which are usually Summer and Autumn diseases.

Conclusive evidence proves that the germ of poliomyelitis is spread not only by diseased, but also by healthy persons. The germ was studied by the Pasteur Institute before the war. It is so microscopic that it is difficult to detect and isolate it because it is not retained even by the finest filters.

The Rockefeller Institute best studied the germ on Dr. Noguchi's method. The virus is destroyed by a heat of from fifty to fifty-five centigrade, and also does not resist formol. Contagion is spread by flies and dust.

CLEAN STREETS NEEDED.

It is necessary that the streets be watered frequently and profusely. Today there are in Paris and France generally several cases of poliomyelitis, but the number is not above the average.

The germ penetrates the body toward the nervous centres by way of the nose and the back of the mouth.

Dr. Simon Flexner of New York, the greatest of all authorities on poliomyelitis, with whom I corresponded, is cognizant of my treatment by means of the human serum, and I wonder whether he applies it. My anti-poliomyelitis serum for human formerly diseased contains substances capable of neutralizing the virus which resides in the nervous centres.

DIFFICULT TO GET SERUM.

The success of the treatment depends upon the timely injection during the initial stages of the disease, and is identical to that in cases of cerebro-spinal meningitis, except that instead of three injections for each thirty cubic centimetres of serum, poliomyelitis requires about eight injections of serum for each five cubic centimetres.

The anti-poliomyelitis serum preserves its healing and immunizing properties for many years. It is difficult to obtain the serum because it is necessary to find persons formerly stricken with the disease who consent voluntarily to be bled as in the case of the anti-meningitis serum when the blood is taken from the elbow veins with a needle.

Two hundred grammes of blood yield about eighty grammes of serum. Today I injected a stricken child with serum from a girl who had the disease two years ago.

Since 1913 I have treated personally thirty-four cases with invariable success, whereas the treatment was begun early.

Stockinglessfad Is Made Illegal at Atlantic City

By International News Service.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 23.—In the words of Beach Director Bossert, "the stockinglessfad has been carried to extremes."

Therefore the order went out that half hose and the absence of stockings will be strictly taboo, illegal, placed under a ban, and established after June 1, 1917. In other words, they will not be permitted.

The decree was the first official intimation of anything but scattering opposition to the stockinglessfad. Many have written protests to the city commissioners.

GERMAN LINER IS READY FOR DASH TO SEA

next larger, the Koln or Wittekind, which have never stated that the Willehad could make the passage.

The Willehad has been tied up at McQuesten's wharf, East Boston. It went into drydock. It came out of drydock Monday, anchored in the harbor stream for thirty-six hours, then returned to McQuest in's wharf today.

It is noted that the steamer was moored in such a manner that it could easily be slipped out and put under way.

While the Willehad was in the stream for thirty-six hours 700 tons of coal were rushed aboard and 25,-000 pounds of ice were taken on.

SHIP IS PROVISIONED.

A large quantity of provisions went on as well. At one time, four lighters were clustered about the steamer, putting aboard ice and provisions.

The depleted crew, lessened by some discharges, has suddenly been increased by sailors drawn from other North German Lloyd vessels in this port.

As soon as the steamer came out of drydock, Monday into the stream a gang of painters began re-painting the vessel, hull, superstructure and all.

In drydock the ship received a most thorough cleaning. Ninety tons of mussels were scraped from the bottom of its hull.

GUARDS ON DUTY.

As soon as the Willehad moved out into the stream two customs guards went aboard and remained there, day and night until the ship returned to its old berth at McQuesten's Wharf. While there are no customs guards aboard now, some of them are always on duty at the wharf, so that the Willehad is under federal observation constantly.

The customs tug Winnisimmet makes daily trips about the harbor and the night launch Irvsamor makes three or four trips after dark.

Agent Charles Kuehlewein of the North German Lloyd Line says:

"This talk of the Willehad going to sea is ridiculous. It would be caught by a British cruiser before it was six miles off Boston lighthouse. So far as I know, this work is merely being done to preserve the ship."

Mr. Kuehlewein said the line has just asked the federal government for permission to put the ocean greyhound Kronprinzessin Cecelie in the Charlestown Navy Yard drydock, as no private dock in Boston can take it. He intimated this as showing that the North German Lloyd Line is merely taking necessary care of its vessels that are in refuge at this port.

COULD FOLLOW COAST LINE.

But the talking on board of so much coal and 25,000 pounds of ice raised the question along the waterfront of what was going to be "preserved" so suddenly.

Although the Russian attacks go on unceasingly in Galicia and Volhynia, the Czar's forces have been unable to make any further progress during the past twenty-four days, and on difficult communication dated August 22, which was made public by the War Office today. It states that the Russians have sustained enormous losses in their assaults. The text follows:

WAR SUMMARY

The importance of the fighting on the western front should not be lost sight of amid unconfirmed rumors of war action by Rumania and Greece. The British report further gains around Thiepval, where the encirclement is proceeding as it did at Guillemont and Clery. One will do well to watch developments on the Somme front, where the Germans have no natural obstacle behind which they can fall back for over thirty miles. An allied success on the Somme should mean the taking of Cambrai, of St. Quentin, the cutting of lines absolutely necessary to the Germans and the consequent withdrawal of Teutonic forces for a considerable distance.

That the Germans themselves appreciate their position is shown by the vigor of their defence, which, during the past twenty-four hours, has taken on the character of an offensive. Paris admits the penetration of French trenches around Estrees on the Somme by the Germans in a series of furious attacks, following terrific fire by heavy artillery. On both sides the artillery duel today continues.

No new light has been thrown on the situation in Rumania and Greece since yesterday. Semi-official advices from Berlin claim Teutonic influence predominates in Bucharest. London intimates quite the contrary. The next few hours may tell the story, as is the case also in Greece, where the Greek soldiers' battle with the Bulgars would make it appear that the influence of Venizelos is growing beyond that of the pro-German King, who stopped the engagement.

The Salonica drive by the allies appears to have reached the point of decisive fighting. Both wings of the allied army have been driven back by the Bulgars. Ultimate success must be a question of men. If the Teutonic allies have numerical superiority, which is not generally believed, they may drive Sarrail's men further back and put a definite end to the drive. If they do not succeed, Nish is in obvious danger. The fall of Nish would mean the cutting off of Germany from her Turkish ally.

Heavy fighting is being kept up along the Stokhod and in Galicia. The Russian advance is stayed, at least for the moment. Vienna insists that her lines in the Carpathians hold and that the Slavs have failed to break through, although Petrograd announces that the Russians have won passage at two points. The truth cannot be long withheld.

and left flanks the Bulgarians have had to pay a costly toll. The artillery which the British, French and Serbian troops have patiently moved forward through the mountains during the past six months have played havoc among the Bulgarian forces.

On their right flank the Bulgarians have penetrated Greek soil for a distance of thirty miles. On their left flank they have pressed forward into Greece about forty miles.

450,000 TEUTON ALLIES.

General Sarrail, commander-in-chief of the "army of nations," as the allied forces has come to be known since the landing of the Italians and Russians, is confident of ultimate success, although the campaign is expected to be a long and bitter one before the allies cut deeply into Serbian territory.

It is estimated here that there are about 350,000 Bulgarians and about 100,000 Austro-Hungarians and German troops on the Teutonic front, but it is noticeable that the main operations have been conducted by German army officers.

Excitement in Greece over the gigantic campaign which has been opened in the Balkans is growing.

Furthermore, it is being heightened by dispatches from Bucharest to the effect that the Rumanian army, approximately 500,000 strong, has been put upon a war footing. The entrance of Rumania into the war would probably compel Greece to abandon her attitude of neutrality and take a defensive attitude.

British Repulsed at Thiepval, Says Berlin

By International News Service.

Berlin, Aug. 23.—British forces trying to encircle the German position at Thiepval on the Somme front renewed their assaults last night, but all were repulsed.

This information was contained in the official statement issued by the War Office today.

The British attacked along the Poteres-Thiepval road, but were unable to push their lines forward because of the hot fire from German artillery and machine guns.

On the eastern front, the efforts of the Russians to recapture lost ground south of Czarny were unsuccessful.

Italians Carry Austrian Lines

Rome, Aug. 23.—Successes for the Italians in the Dolomites Alps on the Tyrol front, were reported by the War Office today. Strong Austrian positions on the western slope of Monte Tofana were captured by the Italians in a storm attack.

In the Travenanzes Valley, in the same region, Austro-Hungarian positions were carried and the Italians took forty prisoners.

There is artillery activity on the Isonzo front, particularly in the area around Gorizia.

The official statement follows: "The enemy intensely shelled positions at the bottom of the Astico valley Tuesday night, but did not develop any infantry attack. The same night an attempt by the enemy to advance between Casseranzigare la Casseraebio and Pastorile on the Asiago plateau was checked by our fire.

"Yesterday in the Tofana area after effective work by the artillery our Alpini and infantry carried strong positions on the western slopes of the Third Tofana and in the Travenanzes valley. The enemy suffered heavy loss. We took forty prisoners.

"In the Gorizia region there are artillery duels. Yesterday afternoon an enemy detachment which approached the Vertoibizza stream was repulsed, leaving numerous dead."

BRITISH REPULSE ATTACKS

By SIDNEY B. CAVE,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Aug. 23.—Two German counter-attacks against the British trenches at Thiepval on the Somme front were repulsed with heavy losses, the War Office announced today.

The British troops have succeeded in holding the ground recently won, despite the desperate efforts of the Germans to dislodge them. The War Office statement follows:

"The enemy made two determined counter-attacks during the night against our new trenches south of Thiepval. In the first the enemy gained a temporary footing, but was immediately driven out. In the second attack, at 1 a. m. he was completely repulsed. The enemy's losses in these two attacks were heavy.

"During the night there was increased hostile artillery fire, especially at High Wood and Hasentin-Le-Petit. Opposite Lens we made a small raid, which was successful.

"Other parts of the British front are as usual."

Germans Enter French Trenches

By CHARLES F. BERTELLI,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Aug. 23.—German troops, in a series of furious attacks on the Somme front last night, succeeded in penetrating French trenches at several points in the region of Estrees, says the official communique issued by the War Office today.

These attacks south of the river followed a terrific burst of artillery activity, during which the German guns raised shells of heavy calibre upon the French positions.

Along that section of the line north of the Somme River there were no infantry actions last night. But the big guns were busy on both sides.

The text of the official communique follows:

"North of the Somme the enemy's artillery, energetically answered by ours, violently bombarded during the night our first lines and our communicating lines north and south of Maurepas. The enemy did not follow up his bombardment with any infantry action.

"South of the Somme after an intense artillery preparation, the Germans yesterday evening attacked south of Estrees and west of Boyecourt trenches taken by us on August 21. They gained a foothold at some points. There was a violent counter-attack during the night. Our artillery duel in the sector of Belloy, Assevillers and Herbecourt.

"The night was comparatively calm on the rest of the front.

"Aviation on the Somme front—Adjutant Dorme brought down his fifth German aeroplane, which fell in the direction of Moislaine, north of Assevillers. Four other enemy machines, shelled by our machine guns at Vertelhizes, stream was repulsed, leaving numerous dead."

RELIGIOUS PREJUDICE CHARGED

New York, Aug. 23.—A sharp tilt developed at the general meeting of the American Federation of Catholic Societies this morning between Colonel Patrick Callahan of Louisville, chairman of the Knights of Columbus committee of religious prejudice, and Joseph T. Brennan of Boston.

In addressing the convention Colonel Callahan said:

"One of the purposes of our committee is to disillusion the non-Catholics, who claim that the Catholics look through the eyes of the capitalists. I notice, however, that there is no unanimity among the Catholics, which is too easy to see from the newspaper reports of this convention. The question of religious prejudice is the greatest before the American people today. It is even greater than the hyphenate question. It is not so much a religious question, and it concerns the entire American people."

DENIES TOLERATION.

Colonel Callahan went on to say that he congratulated the non-Catholic people on their fairness and toleration. When he had finished Mr. Brennan leaped to his feet and after some difficulty made himself heard.

"It is nothing short of silly to make such a remark that five-sixths of the population that is non-Catholic is fair to us," he shouted.

"It is softsoap and nothing more. The Catholics cannot thrive without a struggle, and I can speak with authority on conditions in Massachusetts. There the Catholics give $4,890,000 annually to the State, and what does the State give them? Nothing. Let us not be blind to the fact that there is prejudice against us Catholics.

"It is absurd to say anything else."

The delegates elected all the officers recommended by the committee on elections, there being but one change from the old officials. J. P. Bryan of Boston was dropped and Edith vice-president, being succeeded by Irene Gill.

BRENNAN IS DROPPED.

The officers chosen were: President, John Whalen of New York; first vice-president, Thomas P. Flynn of Chicago; second vice-president, J. J. Colfer of Shakopee, Minn.; third vice-president, Joseph Frey of New York; fourth vice-president, J. J. Cosgrove of Buffalo, fifth vice-president, Joseph Mclaughlin of Philadelphia; sixth vice-president, Peter Gandi; secretary, Anthony Maire of Chicago; treasurer, C. H. Schulte of Detroit; marshal, Anthony Kuhn of Victoria, Kansas.

Kansas City was unanimously chosen as the next convention city. The delegates adopted without dissenting vote the recommendation of the organization committee to reorganize the federation. It was suggested that the constitution be elaborated so that the name be changed to the Catholic Federation of the United States. The reorganization plans have the sanction of the bishops of the country before they can be effected, but it is said there is none of them already approve the suggestion.

The Rev. Father Garesche of St. Louis appealed to the Federation to establish Catholic organizations for young men similar to the Y. M. C. A.

Many delegates left for home last night without waiting for the election of officers and the selection of a next meeting place. The movement of a section of the Catholic Women's League to form an independent organization has received the support of Archbishop Sebastian Messmer of Milwaukee.

WOMEN HOLD MEETING.

It was announced that a meeting was held last night at which the archbishop presided and the following committee was appointed to take up the task of bringing about a separate section for the women: Miss Helen Haney of Randolph, Mass.; Mrs. Sarah A. Conboy of New Jersey; Mrs. F. A. Walsh of Philadelphia; Miss Margaret Loch of Pittsburgh; Miss K. K. Gibson of Chicago; Mrs. Charles Cosgrain of Detroit; Mrs. Mary J. Workman of Los Angeles and Miss C. Rothenhausen.

"I have always been in favor of a separate federation for Catholic women," said Archbishop Messmer. "But, as they are now united with the Federation of Societies, they can form a separate section."

Of the 300 women delegates, about thirty attended the meeting. The separationists are to form a plan which will be submitted to the executive board of the federation.

If it is approved, it will be taken up at the next annual convention.

His Eminence, Cardinal O'Connell of Boston, left for home today, with Bishop Joseph F. Guilfoyle of South Boston, and Dr. John R. Slattery, who had accompanied him on his trip. Father Rev. Monsignor M. J. Splaine, the archdiocesan chaplain, who heads the Boston delegation, with Patrick W. Mansfield and Frank E. Slattery, two leaders, will remain here until the end of the sessions to assist in the work and guide the destinies of the Boston contingent propositions, which are before the convention.

It is absolutely assured that the Boston idea of organization will be accepted and followed by the organization. Tomorrow there will be introduced a change in the bylaws and constitution of the organization so that the idea of organization throughout the country, benefited will be patterned after that which has existed in the Boston diocese.

Tabernacle Rises for Revival

Workmen are making good progress on the Billy Sunday tabernacle at the old ball park on Huntington avenue. Photograph shows men at work today on a section of the ground-work on the great structure. The walls, made of block tiles, are gradually rising.

Work of putting up the walls of the Billy Sunday Tabernacle, to be made of tile blocks, was begun today on the old baseball grounds, Huntington avenue. About 45,000 blocks will be used.

The steel columns have been bolted to the wood, and many of them were also put in place. There will be about 175 columns and 20,000 bolts used in getting them ready.

Only thirty men were at work on the tabernacle today, but this number will be increased to about fifty.

Superintendent L. L. Williams, in speaking of the work today, said:

"We're making good progress in every line of the work. The steel columns will not take very long to get into place. We've had good weather.

"Talk about the good fortune that we've had in building this tabernacle, there's nothing like it. It has not rained one day since we broke ground. That's going some, isn't it?

"This tabernacle will be the finest tabernacle ever erected for this movement.

"There is great interest felt by the men who are working on the job. They are putting in their best."

The cafeteria, which will be run by James A. Floyd, will be 112 by fifty-eight feet.

Mr. Floyd said: "The best food will be served at popular prices. We intend to have a cafeteria which will appeal to all the people. I have been asked about the food to be served and whether I am going to serve pork and beans. I want to say now that pork and beans will be one of the chief dishes with chicken croquettes as a chaser."

AIDES GLAD TO SEE HUGHES MOVE EAST

Reno, Nev., Aug. 23.—Charles Evans Hughes and his official party came to Nevada today after an extended sojourn in California. The candidate arrived here at 8:25 o'clock after a three-some nine-hour trip from Sacramento, where he spoke last night.

It was with a feeling of genuine relief that Mr. Hughes' trip managers saw him safely out of California. The Progressive situation is so delicate there that any factional lines so bitterly drawn that it was a case of "watch your step" at every stop.

Mr. Hughes will make the usual speeches here today. He will also confer with Nevada Republican leaders. Tonight he leaves for Ogden, Utah, where he will spend tomorrow. Mr. Hughes left California without having met Governor Johnson.

JOHNSON PRIZED!

Every effort to bring about a meeting between the two proved futile. In political circles the failure of the two to meet is regarded as ominous, particularly in view of the fact that Chester Rowell, Progressive member of the Republican National Committee, pointedly absented himself from a meeting which Hughes addressed at Fresno, Rowell's home.

Progressives had declared that a meeting between Johnson and Hughes was essential to satisfy the demands of California Progressives for recognition.

It is the belief in political circles that Johnson is piqued because of the favor Hughes has shown his (Johnson's) enemies in the State, and that Progressive disaffection will react upon the situation throughout the country.

At Sacramento, Johnson's birthplace and stronghold, Hughes was received by a large crowd which was cordial in its reception of him.

Hughes' Tour Failure, Says McCormick.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—Radiating enthusiasm over Democratic prospects, Vance McCormick, campaign manager, came to Chicago today for a series of conferences with Middle West leaders.

"The Hughes tour," McCormick said, "has been a complete failure. He has flattened out. He started out strong but has grown steadily weaker.

"He is trying to play a fifty-fifty proposition to please Crane, Penrose and Smoot of his steering committee on the one hand and the Progressive members of his campaign committee on the other. He cannot enthuse one element without offending the other. He has not developed a single issue so far. He's been the biggest help we Democrats could have had."

McCormick said President Wilson would make no campaign tour, but would accept isolated invitations of non-political organizations.

E. H. GARY MEETS CHINA PRESIDENT

Pekin, China, Aug. 23.—Elbert H. Gary of New York, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation, has arrived in Pekin from Manila. He was presented to President Li Yuan-Hung by the American Minister, Dr. Paul Reinsch. Mr. Gary will go to Japan soon.

WAKEFIELD WANTS TO CLEAN UP LAKE

The possibility of an epidemic lurking in the green scum on the surface of Lake Quannapowitt, Wakefield's pleasure park, has aroused the citizens of that town to action, and a meeting of all citizens who are interested in removing the unsightly and unhealthy condition will be held at the town hall tonight.

Swordfish Must Stop Making Holes in This Schooner

Jack O'Brien, fisherman on the Boston schooner Reita, is much injured in his feelings. He was stabbed through the suitcase by a swordfish.

Captain Frank Lyon of the schooner is injured in his pocketbook because this is the second time in a few weeks that a swordfish's sword has been thrust up through the three-inch planking of the Reita's hull.

"These swordfish gotta quit stickin' my boat around," says the skipper.

A few weeks ago a harpooned swordfish ran his sword up through the hull. The sword broke off short. It remained in the hole but started a leak. When the Reita came into port it was necessary to run it up on the marine railway, punch the sword out and close the hole. The Reita set out again.

Today the schooner returned to the Fish Wharf with swordfish, but no report of anything unusual. Jack O'Brien secured shore leave, went down in the fo'cstle and started to pull his canvas extension bag out from under his bunk.

The bag stuck. Jack tugged and grunted. The bag wouldn't come.

Jack hitched to match and investigated. He finally found that a swordfish's sword was stuck up through the hull and the extension bag from underneath, with the tip projecting above the top of the case.

Now they must run the Reita up the marine railway again and dig out this second sword.

Court Holds Man on Death Charge at Bar Harbor

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 23.—Guy Small of Otter Creek was arraigned before Judge Elliott N. Benson in the municipal court today on a charge of murder in killing Mrs. Emma Turnbull, the widow whose body, with the skull crushed, was found beside a path leading to her home three weeks ago.

Small pleaded not guilty and was held without bail for a continued hearing Thursday, August 25.

REXALL MEN IN BUSINESS SESSION

Delegates to the annual Rexall convention gathered today in Symphony Hall for the third business session.

While the men were in session the women journeyed by trolley to Harvard and Radcliffe colleges and other points of interest.

At 1 o'clock both the men and the women gathered at the new United Drug Company laboratory for luncheon. After luncheon there was an inspection of the laboratory and home office. Scores of guides showed the visitors through the big building.

Following the inspection of the building the delegates and the women guests took a trolley trip through the North End district, which will include an inspection of the Liggett candy factory.

CO-OPERATION IS URGED.

"Seventy per cent. of the perfume business comes from women," said E. W. Bartram, one of the day's speakers. He is sales manager of the perfume department.

"There is more than $50,000,000 spent in the United States every year for this kind of merchandise and 70 per cent. of this is purchased at the drug stores," said Mr. Bartram.

"More talcum powder is being used than ever before and men are beginning to use toilet articles to a great extent.

"Three and one-quarter million jars of cold cream were used last year in the United States and more than 650,000 complexion powder boxes."

John H. Mitchell of Russellville, Penn., advocated co-operation and efficiency, in his talk on "Making Candy Pay in the Small Country Town."

"We should have the spirit of co-operation in the selling of the Rexall candies," he said. "We who are stockholders should know that our factories have the most up-to-date machinery and we can turn out the very best candy. I sold myself in my little town more than 17,000 pounds of candy in the last year of the holidays."

LOOK FOR BIG INCREASE.

Horace A. Taylor of Louisville, Ky., asked for three and one-half million pounds more of candy business for the coming year.

"We had last year an increase of $490,000 in profits," he said.

A. J. Neve of San Francisco told of the profit on stationery.

"Rubber sundry merchandise stands that put money in the till, and greater interest in the stationery business will do it," he claimed.

Brushes and toilet articles were also discussed in the selling of the Rexall candies, he said.

"While about everything has advanced, the Rexall products have been well kept under. We have 100,000 orders ahead for brushes and are getting 9,000 brushes from Japan since France has been closed to business during the war," he said.

Charles R. Sherman of Omaha, Neb., told the men in the trade not to make their own perfumes, but to buy the purity of perfumes in their stores. "Above everything else have beautiful women in your store to preside over the perfume department," he urged.

Harry W. Taylor, manager of the candy department, spoke of the increase of business in that commodity and gave an exhibition by means of the stereopticon of the different grades put forth by the Rexall company.

Vice-President C. E. Murray presided.

Thousands are expected tonight at Squantum Field for the fireworks, aerial, musical and military entertainment staged as a feature of the Rexall gathering. Also for the benefit of the resident families of Bay State soldiers now on the Mexican border.

SIMPSON FAMILY HOLDS REUNION

The Simpson Descendants' Association held its seventeenth annual reunion today at Topsfield, Mass. Following the business meeting there was an entertainment. The officers of the association are: Henry T. Simpson, president; A. T. Simpson, secretary; James M. Simpson, Mrs. C. F. Kelley and Mrs. Scott A. Simpson, executive committee.

ENGLAND IS ATTACKED BY A. O. H.

Lowell, Aug. 23.—Resolutions condemning the execution of Roger Casement were adopted today by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the A. O. H. conference, meeting in Lowell.

Mrs. Katherine O'Keefe O'Mahoney presented the resolution, which was as follows:

"Resolved that we record our earnest protest against the inhuman murder of Ireland's latest martyr for freedom, Roger Casement.

"We have already protested at a previous board meeting, and through the Massachusetts delegates at the national convention against the wanton and dastardly murder of sixteen other Irish martyrs, but they were at least given a soldier's death, refused to Roger Casement, who was hanged."

TO TAKE SIMILAR ACTION.

It is expected that the men delegates at the convention will adopt similar resolutions.

John F. Donnelly of Cambridge, the State president, is not a candidate for re-election. Mr. Donnelly has an important position with the Cambridge city government and does not feel that he can devote the necessary time to the office another year.

Other candidates for the offices, the highest in the power of the delegates, are Richard Lawyer of South Boston, the present State secretary, and Patrick J. O'Dowd of Holyoke, the secretary of the organization.

Frederick J. McLaughlin of Jamaica Plain, judging from indications here today, will be returned a winner for the contest of State treasurer. He has the solid backing of the Suffolk County delegates, and according to their story, is bound to win.

QUIT THE RACE.

A day or two ago, there were four candidates for this position. One, at least, has dropped out of the fight, which in the opinion of the delegates from Boston greatly increases McLaughlin's chances. McLaughlin is the president of the Suffolk County Club, where he has made many friends during his tenure of office.

The women will have a merry fight if thrash out before the election of their officers is determined.

The battle for vice-presidency-lies between Miss Mary L. Mahoney of Norfolk and Mrs. Katherine Howard Griffin of Holyoke. Both candidates have their supporters and much hard work is being done by the campaign managers.

For the office of State secretary there is another contest which is the subject of much good-natured rivalry. The candidates are Miss Mary W. Banard and Mrs. Katherine O'Keefe O'Mahoney of Lawrence, who is a national figure in Irish affairs.

VICTORY SEEN AFAR BY LLOYD-GEORGE

London, Aug. 23.—David Lloyd-George, secretary of war, in the House of Commons said the criticisms of the British operations on the Somme front on the ground of their failure to break through the German lines were unjustified. Lloyd-George said:

The Somme offensive relieved the pressure on Verdun and prevented the enemy from pouring his forces into the Russian theatre to support the Austrians against General Brussiloff's thrust.

I think in the dim distance we can see the end.

France is equipped and Russia is rapidly becoming equipped. Italy's equipment has amazed her best friends. Germany has exhausted her chance and she knows it.

It would be a mistake to underrate the efficiency of our task, with all of our resources. But surveying the whole situation, and upon the advice of those more competent than myself, I have arrived at the opinion that we do not hesitate to say that what this country and her allies have to do is to gather together steadily and work together loyally as they have done to the end to ensure that victory will rest on their banners.

FITZGERALD GETS FILM CHALLENGE

Former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald is challenged by E. A. Golden, manager of the Orpheum Play Company, which is producing the film "Where Are My Children?" at the Majestic Theatre, to debate on City Hall steps at 12.15 Friday and tell what he knows about the film. Manager Golden takes exception to statements in the Republic, Mr. Fitzgerald's weekly. If Mr. Fitzgerald accepts the challenge he will be asked five questions to determine, according to Mr. Golden, whether Mr. Fitzgerald has actually seen the film. If Mr. Fitzgerald says he has not seen the film satisfactorily the manager promises "at five minutes to twelve" to have beautiful women in your store to preside over the perfume department," he urged.

Harry W. Taylor, manager of the candy department, spoke of the increase of business in that commodity and gave an exhibition by means of the stereopticon of the different grades put forth by the Rexall company.

Vice-President C. E. Murray presided.

Thousands are expected tonight at Squantum Field for the fireworks, aerial, musical and military entertainment staged as a feature of the Rexall gathering. Also for the benefit of resident families of Bay State soldiers now on the Mexican border.

BRITAIN MUZZLES IRISH EDITORS

London, Aug. 23.—Leaders among Irish radicals attacked the government policy toward Ireland again during debate in the House of Commons, when the government stated that Irish editors had been warned not to print matter likely to cause disaffection in Ireland.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 23.

DEAR EDITOR.

LAST NIGHT,

SOME OF my old

IN SEATTLE,

GAVE ME a banquet.

AND I ate something.

THAT STAYED up.

FOR HOURS.

AFTER I went to bed.

I THINK it was something

THAT SOMEBODY hid.

IN THE salad.

AND ANYWAY,

I HAD a dream.

ABOUT NIJINSKI.

I THOUGHT I saw him and Mme. Karsovina,

AT THE Boston Opera House.

IN BOSTON.

AND AFTER the show.

I WENT and got them.

AND DROVE up.

TO THE Copley-Plaza Hotel.

AND HAD a dance.

AND I dreamed.

THAT WALLACE Munroe

CAME AND stopped me.

AND TOOK Karsovina away.

AND DANCED with her.

AND HE was so rough.

HE BROKE her leg.

AND SHE was lying there.

AND MANAGER Fogg.

HE HEARD about it.

AND CAME up.

JUST AS Dan Clare.

THE DETECTIVE.

WAS GOING to shoot her.

WITH HIS revolver.

AND MR. Fogg

RAISED HIS hand.

AND SAID,

"NOT HERE.

"IF YOU have to shoot her.

TAKE HER over.

"INTO THE Public Garden."

AND DAN said,

"OH, VERY well then."

AND TOOK her.

AND CARRIED her over.

INTO THE Garden.

AND LAID her down.

AND TOOK his revolver.

AND AIMED.

AND FIRED.

AND SHOT himself.

WOMAN FIGHTS INHERITANCE TAX ORDER

Protesting against an order by the Norfolk Probate Court to pay to the State an inheritance tax on $6,030, left her in her employer's will, Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Willgoose Wales of Needham has filed an appeal in the Supreme Court at Dedham.

Mrs. Wales was ordered to pay a 5 per cent. inheritance tax which was demanded by the State tax commissioner. The order was dated on July 19 that a legacy payable to her by the will of Ward N. Hunt, for whom she was housekeeper, was subject to a tax on the Commonwealth of Massachusetts of 5 per cent. with interest at 6 per cent. from June 2.

Mrs. Wales declared that the money received by her, as stated in a clause in the will of Mr. Hunt, was not a gift, but was payable from the estate of the testator in fulfillment of a contract made by her and the testator on April 1, 1903.

At that time, Mrs. Wales, who was then Miss Willgoose, accepted a position as housekeeper for Mr. Hunt and was to receive $20 a week, and at the death of her employer was to receive $2,000.

In addition to this, according to the agreement and as stated in a clause in the will of Mr. Hunt, the housekeeper was to receive $500 for every year she remained with the testator after she reached the age of eighty years, providing her work was satisfactory. She left at the age of eighty-four years, and a proportionate part of $500 for the fraction of a year. The will, began by the said Sarah Elizabeth Willgoose to depend entirely upon my remaining in her employ until my decease, and I am to be sole judge whether her services continue efficient and satisfactory."

FIVE GENERATIONS AT BIRTHDAY PARTY

Gloucester, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Sarah Day Steel quietly observed the 100th anniversary of her birth at her home on Prospect street.

Among the many visitors who called to pay their respects were five generations of her descendants. The oldest guest was Mrs. Sarah Day Steel, who is the great-grandmother of the centenarian. Every member of the descendance, who include one daughter, Mrs. George H. Proctor, five grandchildren, twelve great-grandchildren and six great-great grandchildren.

Held for Wife's Death.

Abraham Rinog of Lovejoy street served the hearing on the charge of manslaughter, following the death of his wife recently, and his case went to the Grand Jury with bail fixed at $5,000.

GUARD COAST FROM ATTACK BY "REDS"

Washington, Aug. 23.—The Navy Department was on a war basis today.

All of its big chiefs were in close touch with the bureaus of operations. The big wireless plant across on the Virginia shores of the Potomac at Radio was sputtering like a short-circuited electric transmitting apparatus.

Every agency of the naval branch of the government was working at feverish speed to lay Rear Admiral Helm and his "blue" defending fleet in the task of defending the Atlantic coast, with its wonderful big cities, from enemy invasion. The enemy battle fleet escorting an invading army which filled thirty transports.

The big war game began at 6 o'clock yesterday morning. The attacking fleet is commanded by Admiral Mayo, chief of the Atlantic fleet. The defending fleet is mostly consists of scout and battle cruisers, dreadnoughts, destroyers and submarines, all convoying the big fleet of transports. He has until September 1 to make a landing on the Atlantic coast between Eastport, Me., and Cape Hatteras.

MUST PREVENT LANDING.

The task of Read Admiral Helm, commanding the reserve fleet, is to prevent this landing. Theoretically, both forces have been given greatly augmented paper strength, but the whole defending squadron is at about the strength it will have when provisions of the recently passed naval bill are effective.

The Navy Department has instituted in connection with the manoeuvres a drastic censorship on movements similar to that which would prevail in war time. The reason assigned was rather unique.

"If the newspapers published the whereabouts of our ships," the official said, "foreign naval officers were carried out on a merchant vessel, as would be natural, it would be very easy for the attacking squadron to hold up such a ship and by merely looking over the side could reveal all positions. Nothing of the sort can be permitted."

FIGURING ON DUTY.

The twelve battleships of Admiral Helm's reserve fleet are manned in part by civilians, who are getting naval training and mixed by naval militiamen. Ahead of the main fleet is a force of fast destroyers and cruisers commanded by Rear Admiral Gleaves.

The "red," or attacking fleet, was, when the war began, 600 miles directly east of Cape Hatteras. The rules of the game provide that the manoeuvres shall take place within a square of 600 miles. Admiral Mayo's fleet is more speedy than that of Admiral Helm's and the problem of the latter is serious.

ITALIAN VESSELS REPORTED SUNK

London, Aug. 23.—The sinking of the Italian steamer Erix, of 885 tons gross, and the Italian sailing vessel Dea, of 147 tons gross, is announced by Lloyds Shipping Agency.

DISCOVERY MAY HELP STIELOW

Buffalo, Aug. 23.—The body of a dead horse, which is said to have been shot by Clarence O'Connell, the Asburn fireman, convicted when Erwin King's confession implicated in the murder of Charles E. Phelps and Margaret Wolcott of West Shelby—the crime for which Charles F. Stielow is now in the death house at Sing Sing—was dug up near Lockport and several 32-calibre bullets were removed from the skull.

David A. White, counsel for Stielow, believes this discovery will aid the friends of Stielow who argue before Justice Rodenbeck in Rochester today that Stielow should have another trial. Bullets from a revolver of the same calibre killed Phelps and his housekeeper.

RETAIN ARMS EXPERT.

Stielow's lawyers have retained A. R. Lane, an arms expert, to examine these bullets, which have been in the custody of District Attorney Knickerbocker of Orleans County, since soon after the murder, and compare them with those taken from the skull of O'Connell's horse.

It was asserted by King that O'Connell accompanied him on the night of the murder and fired the fatal shots.

Mrs. Stielow, wife of the condemned man, swore that she recognized the voice of a man near the Phelps home on the night of the murder as that of Clarence O'Connell. It was brought out at Stielow's trial that a light wagon passed up the road between the Phelps house and the home of Stielow on the night of the murder.

RECALLS MAN'S VOICE.

In his confession King said he and O'Connell went to the Phelps home in a wagon. Mrs. Stielow now says this wagon stopped in front of her home and some one called for her husband. He went to the door, she says, and she recalls the voice she heard as that of O'Connell, as he had kept a saloon in Shelby. Her affidavit said in this call:

"Hello, Stielow, is that you?"

Mr. Stielow replied, "Yes," and started down the road. Before I got there I heard the driver say, 'Does old man Phelps still live across the hill?' and Stielow answered 'Yes,' and then the wagon drove away. Mr. Stielow afterward told me two men were in the wagon—O'Connell and another he did not know."

Stielow's lawyers are busy gathering evidence to create a legal issue.

A dispatch from Albion, N. Y., says that James W. Osborne, of counsel for Stielow, has applied to Governor Whitman for the removal from the office of District Attorney Knickerbocker.

HITCHCOCK WILL FIGHT IN MAINE FOR HUGHES

By International News Service.

New York, Aug. 23.—Chairman Willcox of the Republican National Committee has named his long-delayed advisory committee.

Prominent in the list is Frank H. Hitchcock, who managed the Hughes pre-nomination campaign and who would have been national chairman had the presidential candidate not declined to reward him for his services.

Hitchcock is counted on to put some ginger into a lethargic campaign. Though Wilcox declares that the committee is merely advisory, those who sincerely desire Hughes' election have urged Hitchcock to take command long enough to at least carry Maine. Such alarming reports have come from that State that Wilcox suffered a severe headache.

William R. Ward, the Westchester leader, is the only other New York man besides Hitchcock on the committee. The remainder of the members are:

R. Livingston Beeckman, Governor, Rhode Island; Theodore E. Burton, Ohio; Charles G. Dawes, Illinois; A. T. Ellerbe, Minnesota; Charles W. Fulton, Oregon; Raymond Robins, Chicago; Senator Roseter G. Scherick, John Wanamaker, Philadelphia, and James Wilson, Iowa.

Lynn Man Killed by Horse.

In attempting to help a fallen horse to its feet on Atlantic avenue, Broad street, Joseph Voucher, of No. 282 Boston street, Lynn, was kicked in the face and so badly lacerated that he was taken to the Relief Hospital.

Don't Let Soap Spoil Your Hair

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—Advertisement.

TO END MEXICAN STRIFE BEFORE ELECTION

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Settlement of all questions in dispute between the present de facto government of Mexico and the United States is expected by President Wilson before election.

Secretary of State Lansing and Ambassador Designate Arrendondo planned to confer today to perfect arrangements for the meetings of the joint committee. Asbury Park or some nearby New Jersey Summer resort will be chosen as the meeting place. This will put the commission close to the Summer White House, so that President Wilson will be available at all times for consultation.

Ambassador Designate Arrendondo also will move his staff to the place selected so that he can keep General Carranza fully advised of everything that is going on.

GRAY ON PEACE COURT.

The commission is admittedly one of the strongest that yet has passed upon Mexican affairs, and its personnel is as follows: American section, Franklin D. Lane, secretary of the interior; Judge George Gray of Delaware, retired federal jurist and since 1910 a member of the International Court of Arbitration under The Hague Convention; John R. Mott, the general secretary of the International Y. M. C. A. and noted religious worker.

Mexican section, Luis Cabrera, Mexican Minister of Finance, and one of the most powerful reform leaders; Ygnacio Bonillas and Alberto Pani, noted engineers and close friends of First Chief Carranza.

The first task of the commission will be to decide whether the Pershing expedition shall be withdrawn from Mexico.

A NEUTRAL ZONE.

It is considered certain that this will be agreed on speedily. It is also expected that a neutral zone will be fixed early in the negotiations, into which the American or Mexico forces can be hurried to stop bandit raids. On this point geographical considerations will probably prove the only stumbling block.

With the military situation out of the way, it is expected that the commission will take up the question of financing the present Mexican government. It is believed that a plan will be developed which will make it possible for this government again to interest capital in Mexican affairs and to get money to pay off all existing claims, so that a fresh start can be made by the southern republic.

MISS MARGARET WELLINGTON,

a debutante of last November, who is to wed Dudley Porter Ranney at Summer home in Weston.

A bridal of the early Fall—or late Summer, just as one pleases to regard it—will be that of Miss Margaret Wellington and Dudley Porter Ranney, whose engagement was announced last February.

The wedding will take place on Saturday, September 16, at "Gateways," the Summer home in Weston of Miss Wellington's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Wellington of No. 13 Chestnut street, Beacon Hill.

The bridesleet is a debutante of last November and a member of the Vincent Club and the Sewing Circle of 1915. Her younger sisters are the Misses Virginia and Linda Wellington.

Mr. Ranney, who was named for his maternal grandfather, Dudley Porter of Haverhill, was graduated from Harvard in 1912 and from Harvard Law School three years later. He is now in his father's law offices.

43 SUMMONSES IN NANTASKET BEACH RAID

Forty-three persons, it became known today, have been summoned to appear in the Hingham Police Court, Friday, charged with playing ball on the beach at Nantasket. The offenses are alleged to have occurred last Sunday when the police claim that the safety of many persons were imperiled by several score of men and boys playing ball along the beach.

The crusade of the Metropolitan police has stirred Nantasket. The persons who have been playing ball at the beach Sundays assert they have a right to do so. They point to the recent decision of a judge in the Chelsea Police Court, who decided that the persons arrested for playing ball at Revere Beach were not guilty of any offense, as he declared that a baseball is not a missile.

The issuing of the summonses by the Hingham Court has led to charges against the Metropolitan police. Some of the Summer residents at Nantasket assert that while the police make things disagreeable for those persons who are only able to spend weekends at the beach, the wealthy inhabitants of Atlantic Hill are not molested when they play ball on the beach during the week-end.

Replogle Heads New $13,500,000 Vanadium Co.

By International News Service.

New York, Aug. 23.—J. Leonard Replogle is to become head of the American Vanadium Company.

Replogle, a comparatively young man in finance, was the centre of much interest last year when he defeated his one-time employer, William H. Donner, in a warm contest involving the purchase of the Pennsylvania Railroad's holdings in Cambria Steel. Donner was former president of Cambria.

The American Vanadium Company, of which Replogle is to become the guiding factor, has been purchased by a group of Eastern capitalists, including Kuhn, Loeb & Company, Cassett Company of Philadelphia, and other financiers.

The company will be recapitalized at $13,500,000. In the Cambria deal Replogle received $1,000,000 in cash and he will reap even a richer harvest. He is one of the largest shareholders in Vanadium, and will receive a round $1,000 a share for his holdings, partly in stock and partly in shares. He paid $200 a share for the holdings.

John J. EXPRESS HITS WRECKING TRAIN

Dispatches from Erie, Pa., state the New York Central Limited No. 29 east bound from St. Louis, while running at a speed of fifty miles an hour crashed into the rear end of a wrecking train at the western city limits early today.

The collision hurled passenger the full length of the coaches, in which they were riding, slightly injuring several. The engine of the wrecker was badly damaged.

The Limited is one of the heaviest of the Central's trains from the West and has Chicago-Boston sleepers, that come through from Albany on No. 16.

LEON DIDIER HELD FOR OVERSPEEDING

Leon Didier, the French eyele racer, was in Chelsea Court today on a charge of overspeeding an automobile on Revere Beach parkway. He was driving for Mme. Morel of Beachland avenue, Revere, and he explained that the motor was working badly. Mrs. Morel, a comely Parisian, took the stand to testify through an interpreter.

"Didier is quite a 'speed merchant,' isn't he?" asked Lieutenant Maurice Finn.

Mme. Morel smiled and ejaculated in French. The interpreter translated: "She says Monsieur Didier can beat anything in America or Paris." The court found Didier guilty, but filed the case.

Indians in Last Stand

Red Sox Seek Cleanup

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

This is the last chance to see the Indians with Tris Speaker and the World's Champions perform at the local ball yard. Manager Carrigan and his champions have cleaned up three in a row, of which two were shutouts, and they look strong enough and are going at such a fast clip that a quartet of victories from Cleveland is highly probable. The pitching selection for today is Ruth for Boston and Coveleskie for Cleveland.

The series with the Cleveland club so far has demonstrated that the Red Sox have the spirit and the confidence even though the pitching has been uneven and the work of the team at times hardly up to world's series form. They have lost opportunities for runs which, while they didn't cost anything so far as affecting the final score, should never have appeared. From now until the pennant is cinched the team should play each game as if it were one of that famous series. Taking chances with a thin lead is hazardous to say the least.

THIS MUST HIT.

The fact that Tris Speaker has not been hitting the ball as he can has shown the Cleveland club to be largely one that depends upon this player's prowess with the bat. Tris' failure to hit has slowed the team down to such a point that unless they take a brace when they leave here for Philadelphia they will not figure as they hope to as runner-up. I am not sure that Fohl has given up hope for the flag, but he doesn't look to have the punch there to start any drive through teams like the Red Sox, the White Sox and the Browns, figuring also the New York team which is beginning to show signs of life again.

In Philadelphia, where the Ragged Regimentals of the league, stand "Pestering Joe" for they have one last place, there is also a chance that Cleveland will meet trouble face to face. Chicago is playing Washington while the Red Sox are fighting the Tigers and St. Louis is over in New York. From this it can be seen that the champions have a big task hustling for every point in each game.

LOOKED LIKE BALL CLUB.

There were many encouraging signs in the game played yesterday. The team looked like a ball club, played an errorless game and its great defensive strength was clearly manifest. In fact, this part of the champions' game all season has held them there, for none can say that they have had anything but occasional flashes of high class pitching. They have held the other teams down, enjoyed many breaks and now look to be in a position where they can edit upon their pitchers to go out and finish up the season in the form they indicated when the team left Hot Springs for the North.

There isn't any question in the minds of those who saw that staff perform in Spring training, but that it should come through at this time. If it does, there will not be much of anything to the race, for when the shape the Red Sox pitching staff has it on any staff in the league. If the twirlers do not come through then the team must rely upon its defence, which is great, and its ability to hit the ball.

Along this line the boys have made a good showing against the Cleveland pitchers. They hit Bagsby for seven and it was his wildness that gave them the first game. They got nine hits in the game on Shrineer Day, eight off Morton and one off Gould. They got seven across with Bagby twirling yesterday and have scored nine runs to Cleveland's one.

Gardner, Harry, Scott and "Hobby" form a stonewall infield, while Lewis, Hooper and Walker are a big combination. Tilly appears to have found himself, and the team, if it wins, will have accomplished what I believe no other team ever did, a repeat with the loss of but one player and hitter.

The attendance during the days opening this week has been large, and while the first week of their home stay was almost a record for turnstile count, this week bids fair to come close, for the Tigers with Ty Cobb arrive tomorrow for the rest of the week.

Evers' Turn to Laugh

Bloomington, Ill., Aug. 23.—"President Tener has been venting his personal spite against me, but this time I have the laugh on him."

That was the way Captain Johnny Evers of the Braves sized up his latest suspension, when he arrived here this morning with the squad of Braves that stopped off to play the local Three-Eye League team while en route from Cincinnati to Chicago.

Evers will appear on the coaching lines this afternoon because the contract calls for him to be on deck. He will likely go to his home at Troy, N. Y., from here and may remain there the rest of the season.

His left arm and shoulder are all tied up with neuritis and he doesn't believe he will be able to play any more ball this Summer.

SAYS LAUGH ON TENER.

"I've got the laugh on Tener because of my illness," states Evers. "I'm no good to the Braves now. Can't help them a bit, nor do any harm to their opponents, and I'm suspending indefinitely just because Umpire Quigley saw fit to chase me from the coaching lines at St. Louis last Saturday.

"I said nothing hot to Quigley, but I don't blame him. It's Tener that rilles me. Because he has it in for men personally, he suspends me every time he gets a month as half a chance.

"As long as I'm in the game, I'm going to continue fighting for my club, and Tener nor anyone else is going to stop me with their fines or suspensions. I intend to write Tener a letter asking him to let me know next Spring whether I'm reinstated or not. If I am, I'll join the team then, providing my health permits.

UMPS UNDERSTAND TROJAN.

"The umpires understand my attitude towards them. I fuss with them on afternoons and then spend a pleasant evening with them, because they know I'm not fighting them, but fighting to win games.

"With Tener it's different. He's been trying to 'get' me, but this latest indefinite suspension won't get him anything because he can't hurt either myself nor the club with it.

"It's been tough trying to do my best for the club and having the head of the league turn almost my every act into a case of rowdyism. But I'm not going to quit just because of him."

ROOKIE FOR PAT MORAN.

Philadelphia, Aug. 23.—President Baker of the Phillies announces that he has signed Outfielder Gandy of the Portsmouth, Va., club. Gandy will not report until next Spring.

Nehf Displays Wares for the Home Folk

Terre Haut, Ind., Aug. 23.—This being the home town of Arthur Nehf, an exceptionally clever young pitcher, and likewise the hamlet in which he first gained pitching glory, a half holiday has been declared because of his visit here today. There would be no call for a celebration were he not accompanied by George T. Stallings and half of the athletes who draw salary from the Braves.

Joe Connolly has a host of friends here, for some few years back Joe was a left handed chucker on the pay roll of the Terre Taute club. Others of the Braves are known in this town and a gala occasion has been made of their visit. Stallings will unquestionably parade Nehf before his townsfolks that they might admire him in big league harness on the chucking line.

After today's show, which incidentally is the last exhibition day of this trip, the club moves on to Chicago for an all important series with the Tinkers. And then it will be seen whether or not Heinie Zimmerman is to wear a Brave uniform or continue in the harness of some other outfit.

Paton and Wright Clash in Press Club Tourney

One of the best contests scheduled for today at the Wollaston Golf Club, in the Boston Press Club Tournament, will have Larry Paton of the Homestead Golf Club, playing Freddie Wright, the State junior champion, who hails from the Albemarle Club.

Wright's ambition is to play in the National Amateur Championship, at the Merion Club, Haverford, Pa., a week from Monday. He believes that a great deal will depend on his showing against Paton, but if he fails to play up to his standard, the chances are he will not make the trip.

Paton, who was defeating for the first time by Wright in the recent open tournament at Woodland, to the tune of 6 and 4, and then lost the second match against Wright in the State amateur tournament after twenty-two holes had been played, feels confident he will be able to pull through with a victory in this afternoon's match.

Paul Tewksbury meets R. L. Smith of Winchester in the second round of match play. Tewksbury should have little trouble winning. J. S. Phelps and F. G. Thayer, two members of the Wollaston Club, come together in the upper half of the draw. Thayer, if he plays like he performed yesterday, is expected to pull out the victor.

Jack Gallagher and Arthur Goodale, another pair from the Wollaston Club, will fight it out to see who will meet the winner of the Phelps-Thayer contest. Gallagher was around in 79 in his match with J. R. Brenhan, and Goodale gave S. Dipeco a lesson in how to play Wollaston without playing the odd at any time in the contest.

There are a number of good golfers playing in the second division, and their contests from handicap today are apt to be of the sensational type. H. N. Raymond and Tom McCarthy, the latter baseball scout for the Red Sox, should have a battle royal. McCarthy, if playing up to form, will win, as Raymond is allowing McCarthy seven strokes.

WILD BILL HOPEFUL HIS TEAM WILL WIN

New York, Aug. 22.—J. Franklin Baker, the Yankee slugging third baseman, is lost to the team for two more weeks, according to Manager Donovan. The Yankees are back on their stride and today are in third place. One by one Donovan's cripples are getting back in the game and "Wild Bill" is hopeful he will have all his stars on duty the last thirty days of the campaign and thus overtake the flying Red Sox.

BROWN IN CHARGE AT EAGLES' GAMES

George V. Brown, the well known athletic impresario, is in charge of the track games to be held at the old Readville track on Saturday, September 2, under the auspices of the Hyde Park Lodge, F. O. E. Seven open amateur events are scheduled, including the century and furlong dashes, quarter, half mile runs, relay race and running high jump.

Prizes are given for the first three positions and the initial entry fee is twenty-five cents with ten cents for each additional event. Entries close next Saturday with G. V. Brown at the B. A. A.

Bulk of the Stars Fail to Play at Southampton

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Maurice E. McLoughlin, former national tennis champion, and Ichiya Kumagae, the Japanese expert, defaulted their matches in the Meadow Club tennis tournament here.

The tournament established a record for defaults, of high class competitors, as a total of seventeen were marked up for the day. The extreme heat, and the approach of the national tournament next week were the chief reasons for the failure of McLoughlin and Kumagae to compete.

The playing of Rowland Roberts, the youthful Californian, William J. Clothier, former national champion, and Count Otto Salm of Austria stood out as the features of the afternoon play.

The seventeen-year-old San Francisco champion, upheld his net game with far better results than he had in the morning, when he defeated Mimmal. He scored over Arthur S. Crain of New York, 6—3, 6—1.

Clothier defeated Edwin R. McCormick of San Francisco, 6—3, 6—1. Count Salm mastered Arthur H. Cerby of Princeton after a rousing duel, 6—4, 5—7, 6—3.

R. Norris Williams, 3d, former national champion, retained his place in the tournament despite the evidences of his being far below par. He held sufficiently steady to beat Edmund W. Peaslee, one-time Yale captain, 6—3, 6—0.

With only sixteen survivors in the singles, it is planned to start the doubles today.

Moran and Mack Draw

Vic Is Hit of Encounter

By RINGSIDE.

Master Vic Moran of New Orleans, a graduate of the famous French market district of the Southern city, the stamping ground of Andy Bowen and Jack Everhardt, two of the greatest battlers of their day, in ye olden times, and which has also produced Joe Mandot and Frankie Russell, two modern gloveseons of renown, registered an emphatic hit in his twelve-round muss with Frankie Mack of Beachmont, at the Arena last night, even if he only gained a draw verdict from Referee Larry Conley.

Once more Mack disappointed his friends when in line to gain his long overdue recognition here at home. Last night's weight condition was 136 pounds at 3 p. m. Mack failed to as much as show up at the appointed hour. Moran was on hand and Vic made weight. The Armory A. A. officials forced Mack to climb on the scales at ringside. The bar bobbled until placed at 147 pounds.

Naturally, when Announcer Benny Cothues stared the weights, as the two boys were puling on their gloves, the fans let out a squawk and some 95 per cent of the real interest was taken out of the battle. Moran, while badly outweighed, put up a whale of a bout and is almost bound to be seen in action at the Arena again.

The little Southerner is a busy little gloveseon. He won the aggressor nine-tenths of the way; did the bulk of the clean scoring; gained the long knockdown and was not guilty of doing any holding, whereas Mack fractured this rule of the sport several times.

A CLEAN LITTLE BATTLER.

Likewise did Moran fight an extremely clean battle. He floored Mack with a stiff punch, which landed on the pit of the stomach, in the eighth round. It was as clean, also as stiff, a body blow as ever went in. When Mack appealed to Referee Conley, claiming a foul, Moran backed away, awaiting the official ruling. Mack was up at the count of one and Moran should have renewed his attack. But Vic was mum for fully five seconds.

MORAN HAD A SHADE.

Just before the bell sounded, ending the tenth round, Moran did hit Mack low. There was no mistaking that punch; it was below the waist line. While Conley was deliberating what to do, the bell sounded. Then, he asked Mack if he was too badly hurt to continue.

"No," gamely replied the Beachmont boy. "I want a little rest; then I'll be all right."

Mack came out of his corner for the eleventh round evidently little, if any, the worse for the punch. He made the session an even one, but was outhit and out-stepped in the twelfth and last round. While the bulk of the fans thought Moran had a little something on Mack, Conley rendered a draw verdict, and, in the writer's opinion, his call was not much out of line. As a rule, Mack has got the worst of the local decisions, so it was only fair Frankie should at last get the shade.

To the AMERICAN, after the bout, Referee Conley said: "I felt I was only doing Mack justice in calling the bout a draw. He was fouled in the tenth round and I could have stopped the set-to then. But when Mack was game enough to continue I figured I should be lenient with him. But for the foul I would have declared Moran the winner."

Billy Myers, the squatty little New Yorker, took Johnny Dundee's measure against Joe Morgan at Manchester, N. H. It was even more of the way, as it looked, but Maffitt Flaherty figured Morgan had done the cleaner hitting and decided in his favor.

Charley Sheppard of the South End outhustled George Brooks of Cambridge in six rounds and Johnny Morris had a snap with "Kid" Lee, a little colored party from Memphis, Tenn., in a bout of the same length.

With 237 entrants in eighteen events, the N. E. A. A. A. From among the winners in the different events will be chosen the team which will represent Massachusetts at the national championships, held at Newark, N. J., next month. The local association hopes to pick a most formidable team and to thus make a big showing in the games to come.

OLD TIMERS HAVE THEIR SECOND DAY

The second Old-Timers' outing for the season of 1916 will be held on Sunday, August 27, at the well-known O'Brien's farm, in Hollister. This time the outing will be held, rain or shine. The committee in charge have arranged a fine list of sports, and most of the old-time athletes will be seen in action.

Dinner will be served on the arrival of the party at the farm, after which will be held the sports. Tickets for the dinner can be secured by applying to George V. Brown, Boston Athletic Association. In order to make the necessary arrangements the committee would like to know by Thursday night, at the latest, just how many will attend the outing. Special cars and automobiles will leave Park square on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

Flyers Meet in Title Clash at Beach Oval

TONIGHT'S REVERE CARD.

American motor-paced championship (50 miles). Starters: George Wiley, Syracuse, N. Y.; Clarence Carman, Jamaica, L. I.; Bobby Walthour, Atlanta, Ga.; Fred Herbert, Fall River.

Amateur and professional events.

Fred Herbert of Fall River, one of the sensations of the current bicycle season, is being generally picked as the rider to wrest the American motor-paced championship from George Wiley at the Revere Cycle Track tonight, when this pair, together with Clarence Carman and Bobby Walthour clash in a fifty-mile race for the title.

Wiley has shown but little form in late weeks. The diminutive Syracuse boy rider has been riding under handicaps, due to injuries, and, although he has been coming along rapidly, it will be several weeks at least before he regains his form. If Wiley wins it will only be through his gameness.

Mayor Curtis of Revere will be a guest of honor at the races and he will present the winner the medal, emblematic of the American championship.

Yale Coach on Job Soon

Squad Reports Sept. 5

New Haven, Ct., Aug. 23.—Yale expects to start its football season late this week with the arrival of its new head coach, Tad Jones, and several aides.

Jones has been spending the Summer at his home in Excello, Ohio, and in a Summer camp and has been in close touch with the candidates. Captain "Cupid" Black has been in Ohio much of the time and has made a couple of visits to this city to settle football details.

He has ordered 125 candidates to meet for their first practice here Tuesday, September 5, but Jones and his executive associate, Mike Sweeney, will be here in a few days to get the stage for the great gridiron drama.

JONES HIGH STANDARD.

Next to Percy Haughton of Harvard, Jones will probably be the highest salaried head coach in the country. He is said to have a three-year contract with Yale, calling for about $30,000. He has never coached at Yale before as a member of the resident staff, although he has assisted several head coaches. He has been coach at Exeter for several seasons.

Yale has a record-breaking coaching staff for this Fall, including Mike Sweeney, Dr. Billy Bull, Arthur Bridas, Billy Marting, Arthur Yates, Nate Wheeler and a number of the players of last year's eleven, as resident squad, while nearly all the former captains and stars will be here for a week or two before the season closes.

An innovation will be made in having an official who does no field coaching, but directs mass of executive details. This job has been given to Mr. Sweeney, who has organized and campaigned football at the Hill School, Pottstown, Pa., for years. He will be known at Yale as "athletic organizer." He will take up other sports than football, both major and minor in nature, and will endeavor to pull Yale from its losing streak.

PROMOTION OF LIEUTENANT IS CRITICIZED

By BERT FORD.

Second Brigade Headquarters, El Paso, Tex., Aug. 23.—Dissatisfaction continues to be expressed in the medical corps of the Massachusetts organizations camped on the border, because of the appointment of Lieutenant Charles R. Morgan as major of the two ambulance companies.

Criticism is not directed against Major Morgan so much as it is against Surgeon-General Frank F. Williams, who is accused of playing politics in placing Morgan above Captain George F. Keenan, commander of the original company and the only ambulance company from Massachusetts on the border.

Major Morgan's meteoric rise is cited as a glaring example of the elements that undermine the National Guard. Medicos say that without considering personalities, Captain Keenan was entitled to promotion and that Morgan might have been well satisfied to be made captain.

WITH MILITIA 20 YEARS.

It appears to be the concensus of opinion that Captain Keenan was the logical choice for advancement because of seniority and service. Captain Keenan is a West End boy and the son of "Tom" Keenan, a veteran Boston newspaper man. He is a prominent Boston surgeon.

Although a young man, he has been identified with the militia twenty years and is one of the few medical experts with a line of experience which makes him doubly valuable.

When the first ambulance company was wavering, Captain Keenan was asked by Surgeon-General Williams to whip it together and he did by hard work. Today it is the foremost ambulance outfit in the National Guard of the country. Captain Keenan's outfit has the record for the longest road marches and has exhibited on various occasions, notably on the Common, prior to the militia parade last Fall and the preparedness parade.

Captain Keenan handled his men and equipment with such dispatch that they were the first Bay State unit to reach the Mexican border, although they started after other organizations. The ambulance company camp at Pershing has been pronounced a model and Captain Keenan and his staff, Captain Leonard W. Hassett of Lynn, Captain Mason D. Bryant of Lowell, and Lieutenant David L. Williams and Lieutenant Frederick W. O'Brien of Boston have taken an active part in medical work at Fort Bliss and in camp duties. Lieutenant O'Brien has given regular army surgeons instructions in X-ray work at the base hospital.

APPOINTMENT IS ATTACKED.

Captain Keenan has declined to discuss Major Morgan's appointment, but his sympathizers in the militia camps are expressing themselves vigorously on the matter. They say it is poor reward for Captain Keenan who has given so much of his time and energy to the cause.

Major Morgan is stationed with his new ambulance company at Framingham. He was a lieutenant about five years and had a short term of hospital service in the navy. During the week of concentration at Framingham he was excused for illness and the next news received from him after the forces reached the border told of his promotion.

Battery B of the Massachusetts Artillery went on its first field practice and slept last night under pup tents at Ysleta, eight miles from Pershing. Captain John F. P. Herbert of Worcester received peremptory orders and men and equipment were under way in an hour and twenty minutes. Lieutenant-Colonel Davis was thrown from the basket of a motorcycle in his haste to reach the scene of entrenchment, but received nothing more serious than a mud bath.

He found Captain Herbert's batteries skilfully concealed and in effective positions to conduct the theoretical shelling of San Jose, a nearby village. Another battery will go out today and wage a sham battle with B Battery. The men enjoyed the departure from camp life.

Major Frank S. Elliott, who resigned from the Eighth Regiment because of business reasons, was given a farewell dinner in the Officers' Club. His business partner, Lieutenant-Colonel William H. Perry, has just returned from a thirty-day furlough granted to permit him to straighten out their printing business until Major Elliott's return to Boston.

BERTH FOR LIEUTENANT M'DADE.

Lieutenant William A. McDade has been attached to the quartermaster's department, selecting camp sites. Lieutenant Carl H. Tobey, M Company of the Eighth, living at No. 7 Vinal avenue, has started for Boston on a thirty-day furlough, owing to illness of a member of his family.

Chaplain H. Boyd Edwards of the Eighth arranged with a local bank to borrow $10,000 at 6 per cent., if the government does not hurry and pay the regiment. A fresh consignment of cots will give each company eighteen more, but leaves scores shy. Captain Thomas A. Brown of A Company of the Eighth, an ordnance expert, has been detailed to Columbus, N. M., for ordnance duty.

PRICE OF BEANS GOING UP AGAIN

Chicago, Aug. 23.—A further advance in the price of beans is expected. A year ago beans cost the housewife five cents a pound; the retail price now is 11 cents a pound. The demand for beans for European armies and for United States troops along the border are said to be the principal causes for the advance in price.

HEALTH 'VERY WELL,' CLAIMS CARNEGIE

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 23.—Andrew Carnegie, on returning from a fishing trip, caused word to be given to inquirers that he was "very well." His secretary said the millionaire philanthropist was enjoying "very good health."

Mr. Carnegie will leave on his yacht Thursday for a cruise along the coast of Nova Scotia.

Pianos and Musical Instruments.

YOU CAN PLAY THIS PIANO

Even if you do not know the first thing about music, you can play the Autopiano. You can play popular airs, classics, operas, or dance music and it will sound like the work of an accomplished musician.

The Autopiano is played the same as an ordinary piano—or by inserting a roll of music and using the pedals. It is the acme of perfection and heads the world's procession in piano-making.

We Should Put an End to Interference with the Mails

THE purpose the British censorship has had in view while delaying, distorting, falsifying and most frequently destroying the messages and letters sent from Germany by neutral American newspaper correspondents is perfectly plain.

That purpose has been, from the beginning, to excite hostile feelings against Germany in America. And the purpose has been accomplished in great part, for the majority of American newspapers took the bait with a childish credulity that is certainly not complimentary to their thinking machinery, and American public opinion is always formed by newspapers.

The national harm resulting from this successful effort of the London Press Bureau and censorship is not yet apparent. But it is certain that we shall suffer much business loss after the war is over and have active and powerful diplomatic enemies in all our foreign relations, when there was no necessity at all for creating such enmity.

We have simply been made one of the catspaws with which it has always been England's custom to pull her own chestnuts out of the fire.

The most serious indictment against this British control of our cable and postal communications with central Europe is that it came within an ace of getting us into war with Germany and Austria by the most flagrant suppression or distortion or downright falsifying of cable and mail messages intended to pass between Germany and America.

We escaped that war only by the German Emperor using his authority and his unbounded personal popularity with the German people to maintain friendly relations.

Now, we submit that no belligerent Power has any right at all to interrupt or to falsify or to suppress cable or postal communications between the people of another belligerent country and the people of a neutral country.

We affirm that freedom of the mails is an integral and solemnly guaranteed part of the law of nations, and that in molesting, searching, distorting and destroying mails and dispatches en route between Germany and America the British Government violates a law of nations which its own representatives voted for in the conference at The Hague and it itself ratified with its own hand.

Plainly some remedy other than an international treaty must be found for this intolerable situation, since the British Government has no respect for treaties or pledges made to neutrals that interfere with its objects in war time.

There are two methods by which the American people can maintain free and unmolested mail and telegraph communication with Sweden, Norway, Holland, Denmark and central Europe.

One of these is to put our mails on board American warships and instruct the ships' commanders to permit no one to search or molest those mails while they are on the way to their destination.

That would have been Abraham Lincoln's or U. S. Grant's way.

The other way is to remove the unfair and unneutral restrictions and prohibitions put upon the wireless telegraph and permit messages of every kind to go and come as freely over the wireless as over the undersea cables.

The Hague conference made it optional with a neutral government whether it would permit the free and uncensored use of the wireless telegraph or not.

After the British had cut our cable communications with the Central Empires and taken control of our cable communications with friendly neutral countries, Mr. Wilson elected to put a stop to wireless communication, except through one plant—and that plant not allowed to send or receive any messages except under supervision of official censors.

We think this discrimination against the wireless telegraphs, while the cables under British control are free to work as they please, is unfair partisanship and unneutral conduct amounting in reality to a hostile act.

By this unfair advantage the English Government was enabled to present such a distorted and falsified continuous story of the war that even intelligent Americans, who ought to have had more common sense, were led to the most absurd and grotesque misconceptions.

For example, many Americans were induced to believe that the civilized and cultured peoples of Germany and Austria had suddenly become barbarous savages, while, by an even more astounding miracle, the ignorant, superstitious and half-savage moujiks and Cossacks of Russia had as suddenly been transformed into enlightened and charmingly soulful heroes, fighting unselfishly and desperately for the civilization and liberties of mankind!

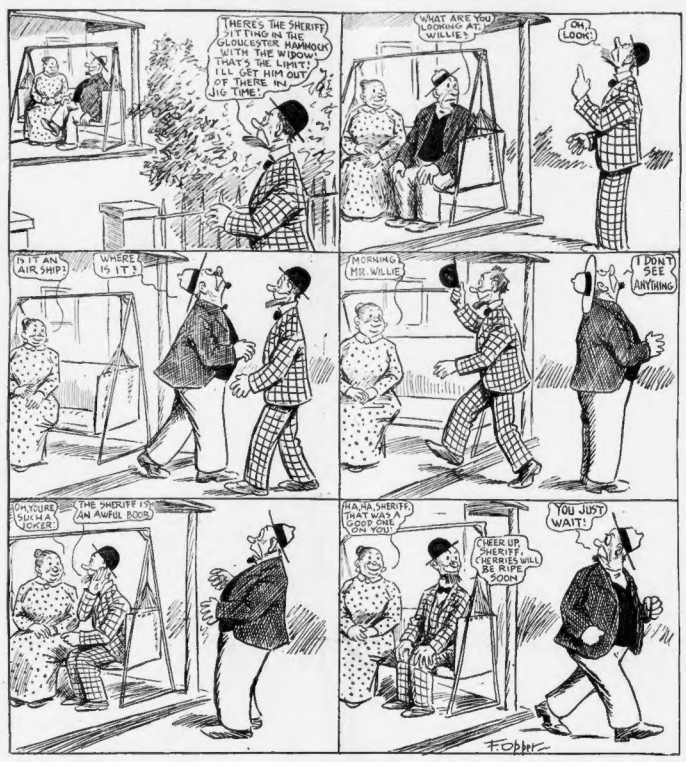
A censorship and a corruption of news that can make intelligent Americans swallow such preposterous and palpable and impossible fiction as that is not good for our national interests, either at home or abroad, and should be abruptly ended, even if it should require force to end it.

COUSIN WILLIE

You'd Hardly Believe It, but the Sheriff Fell for It.

Copyright, 1916, International News Service

Mr. Opper's work appears regularly in animated cartoons in the International Film Service



THERE'S THE SHERIFF SITTING IN THE GLOUCESTER HAMMOCK WITH THE WIDOW! THAT'S THE LIMIT! I'LL GET HIM OUT OF THERE IN JIG TIME!
WHAT ARE YOU LOOKING AT, WILLIE?
OH, LOOK!
IS IT AN AIR SHIP?
WHERE IS IT?
MORNING, MR. WILLIE
I DON'T SEE ANYTHING
OH, YOU'RE SUCH A JOKER!
THE SHERIFF IS AN AWFUL BOOB
HA, HA, SHERIFF, THAT WAS A GOOD ONE ON YOU!
CHEER UP, SHERIFF! THE LIVES WILL BE RIPE SOON
YOU JUST WAIT!

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

Golly! It's Hot!

WHEN a total stranger greets you with a disapproving sneer
And remarks that for a nickel he will bite you on the ear,
Don't take up his proposal nor return his savage stare,
Take a trolley or a taxi and depart away from there.
For in his uncouth demeanor you can very clearly see
That the weather's getting hotter than it really ought to be.

WHEN your dear old Aunt Maria says, last evening, after dark,
She was bitten on the elbow by a hammer-headed shark,
Don't dispute her tragic story, but reply, "Yes, yes! No doubt!"
And as soon as it's convenient make excuses and go out.
And before you tell the neighbors the old lady has gone mad,
Just remember that the weather's 'bout the hottest we have had.

WHEN you hear a fat policeman say he's spent a pleasant hour
In instructing his pet grampus to jump off the Customs tower,
Don't ask to see the creature which performed this dashing feat,
But nod your head engagingly and walk off down the street.
For this curious narration ought to furnish you with proof
That the weather's fried the lining of the fat policeman's roof.

Learning a Lucrative Trade, Anyway

Even if the soldiers on the border are idle, they will be able to support themselves handsomely at the end of their terms of enlistment. Each individual is being taught to cook.

The Force of Curiosity

"Wilson Gets Up at 5 a. m. Every Day."—Headline. Probably so he can get the papers and find what the other candidate is saying about him.

A Grave Peril

Mr. Wilson will not be notified of his nomination till Congress adjourns, and if Congress doesn't adjourn at all the poor fellow may never discover that he is a candidate.

She Must Have Missed Something

Mr. Rockefeller says that in many instances when he had to decide between making money and being right he had to sacrifice the money. A careful study of Miss Ida Tarbell's biography fails to discover the details of any of these instances.

The Only Incentive

I fain would be utterly useless,
I fain would stand all the day idle
And loaf 'round at night with unclouded delight
Making rings on a bar with a seidl.
I envy the birds and the baboon
Who spurn any fixed occupation;
I was born for a shirk, but I still stick at work—
For I'd just hate to die of starvation.

He Has Friends in Both Places

"Taft to Run for United States Senator in Connecticut."—Headline. He'd stand a better chance in Utah and Vermont.

It Won't Last

There is a $1,500,000 surplus in the postal revenues, but just wait till the mail-carrying railroads find out about it.

Business Is Business

Now that the British censors are taking checks out of letters from America, perhaps they can see the utility of letting the correspondents run up bigger space bills.

CHANGES will never cease. Not only are we setting the clock ahead and making the sun officially rise at a civilized hour, but there is a new name proposed for the Dog Days, and that is "Rag Time." It isn't a dance, it's a chorus, or rather an antiphonal service—all hayfeverites sneezing in unison to the breezy rhythm of the pollen of the ragweed. The dog is to be deprived of his day because the official statistician of the American Hay Fever Association has calculated that 76,650,000 sneezes would be set off in August in the State of New York alone, which, if they all went off at once and in the same direction, would well-nigh equal in destructive power the Black Tom Island explosion.

Why should a noble army of martyrs three hundred thousand strong, scattered all over these United States, suddenly, as if at a preconcerted signal, with one accord, begin sneezing and gasping and running at the eyes on the first or second of August? At a season of year when the grip has ceased from troubling and all other noses and throats are at rest? The precision with which they conform to the calendar has something positively uncanny about it, and in an earlier day would unquestionably have been put down to witchcraft, and the paroxysms regarded as a form of demoniac possession. And the last might not be so far wrong, for its victims would cordially agree that whether it be a possession or not, "demoniac" fits it exactly. A veteran hayfeverite will often be able to tell you in advance precisely the day of the month at whose dawn he will greet the rising sun with a salute of sneezes, or more frequently name the day which will be near the middle of the week in which he will begin sneezing. Then after making life "one grand, sweet sneeze" for three to six weeks, the Tchoo devil leaveth him almost as suddenly and with as little discoverable reason as it came.

For many years after its discovery this singular calendar-following habit of the disease was an utter puzzle and mystery, and theories of explanation were about equally divided between the idea of some mysterious celestial influence, some conjunction of the planets or position of the stars, or state of the moon, which precipitated the attack, or that of suggestion and expectancy. According to the latter theory, the victims of the malady having once begun sneezing on that date, or hearing that others invariably began on that date, set their mental alarm clock, so to speak, with such determination that they, too, blew up on the same fatal day.

But these explanations, like most supernatural and mental ones, were simply restatements of our ignorance in a more imposing form and didn't get us anywhere. Besides, instead of the victims of hay fever being unusually superstitious and impressible, as these theories would imply, they are distinctly the opposite. To have hay fever is regarded as a mark of biologic distinction, a sort of certificate of cerebral complexity and of high and sensitive nervous organization. Like all martyrs, the hayfeverites are rather proud of their sufferings and should be entitled to the honorary degree of H. S.—Bachelor of Sneezes.

At all events, they can claim the honorable distinction of being the only sufferers who themselves form associations to study their own disease, to encourage research and offer rewards for the discovery of a cure. These associations meet annually in the various Cities of Refuge and Alsatias in all parts of the country, happy regions which are free from hay fever, and send delegates to the national association, which meets on the last day of August at Bethlehem, N. H., in the White Mountains. It is reported by the frivolously minded that when a delegate rises to take part in the discussions he sneezes twice, otherwise the Chair will not recognize him.

Girls Should Not Marry Unless They Love

If They Do, Says Dorothy Dix, They Will Be Miserable Ever After, Even If the Men They Wed Be Saints and Millionaires Combined.

By Dorothy Dix

A YOUNG girl asked my advice the other day about whether she should marry a certain man who had asked her to be his wife.

"Do you love him?" I inquired.

"No," she replied, "but he is a good man. He is comfortably rich, and my mother wants me to marry him."

"Well, then, let mother marry him," said I. "Don't you do it, for if you marry a man you don't love you will be miserable ever after, no matter if he is a saint and a millionaire combined."

A woman's affections are the medium through which she looks on life. If she does not love him her husband cannot please her, though he were a model of all the virtues.

If, on the other hand, she loves the man who shares it with her, she can be perfectly content in a two by four flat. She can prefer doing her own cooking to going to balls, and be blind as a bat at weaknesses at which all the world jeers.

For this reason no woman should ever marry unless she is wildly, frantically, madly in love. A man may marry a woman for whom he has only a mild and lukewarm regard and get along in reasonable comfort, because after marriage love is only a side issue with him, anyway.

The Masculine Code

Besides, the masculine code teaches a man not to welch, and when he makes a bad bargain to stick to it, so the indifferent husband is not infrequently a fairly comfortable one to live with.

But women are notoriously poor losers, and, no matter how deliberately they make it, when they find out that the marriage of convenience, or the marriage of ambition, or the marriage for money is a failure, they have no shame in squealing, as our sporting friends say, and thus it happens that the unloving wife is invariably a complaining and disagreeable one.

Now, no woman can live with a husband she does not love and be happy, and not one woman in a thousand has the strength of character to do her duty as a wife unless she is happy, or treat a man right not because she wants to but because she ought to.

Of course, the girl who marries a man for whom she has only a pale pink friendship deludes herself by thinking that her liking will warm up into hectic love after marriage and that she will make him a good wife whether she is fond of him or not.

Neither of these miracles takes place. The man who failed to fascinate her when she saw him with company clothes and company manners on is not going to enthuse her when she has a steady dose of him in everyday attire and negligee conduct.

A Difficult Role

Nor, unless she is a wonder of her sex, can she always remember to be considerate, and kind, and forbearing, and patient, and agreeable to one who gets on her nerves, and toward whom her only sentiment is one of obligation and duty.

The plain unvarnished truth is that it takes a lot of love to enable anybody to endure matrimony, which may be a holy estate, but is certainly one full of trials and tribulations that tax both the flesh and the spirit to the utmost. There is no human being with whom we are brought into close contact but who necessarily makes large drafts upon our temper, our taste and our patience.

And this goes double when two people of the opposite sex, looking at life from opposite poles of temperament and training, are bound together in the narrow confines of domesticity, where neither has room in which to draw a single breath of personal liberty. Nothing but love enables any woman to stand the strain.

So the girl who is thinking of marrying should not ask herself if a suitor can give her this or that, or if he possesses certain graces and charms, but only if she loves him well enough to do without things for his sake, and to forgive him his crankiness and love him still.

Those Awful Times

There are times when every husband is cross, and unreasonable, and stingy, and mean; when he rows about little things, and criticises his wife's people; when he refuses to go out with her and is otherwise pesky, and the only way this is bearable is for the wife to be so much in love that she blames his cantankerousness on his business and begs him not to work so hard.

It is far more important for a woman to be in love with a husband than it is for him to be in love with her, because love's spectacles are rose-colored, and while a woman looks through them she sees in a man just what she wants to see.

And as long as a wife is satisfied with a husband he is satisfied with her.

THOUSANDS CHEER GREAT SPECTACLE

OFFICIAL PROGRAM OF EVENTS.

The following is the program for the big carnival tonight at the Braves Field for the benefit of the dependents of the Massachusetts National Guardsmen:

8 p. m.—Concert by the San Francisco Exposition Band.

8:20—Soprano selection by Mme. Grace Hamlin.

8:30 p. m.—Searchlight drill and battle scene by the First Corps of Cadets, Captain Estey commanding.

9:10 p. m.—Selection by Mme. Hamlin.

9:20 p. m.—Daring night aeroplane flight by DeLloyd Thompson in the glare of four 15,000,000-candle power searchlights, the most powerful lights in the world.

9:35 p. m.—Thirty-five-hundred-dollar display of fireworks.

A great throng of men, women and children streamed into Braves Park out on Commonwealth avenue early this evening to enjoy the dazzling carnival of aviation, fireworks, music and military manoeuvres for the benefit of the families of Bay State boys at the border.

This carnival was not only the most elaborate benefit that has been arranged for the soldiers' families since the boys went South, but it was also one of the most spectacular entertainments ever staged at night for a Greater Boston audience.

"WRITING ON THE SKY."

Fiery writing in the sky, looping-the-loop, bomb-throwing and other aerial "stunts" by De Lloyd Thompson, the "human comet," formed a thrilling section of the program.

Drills by the First Corps Cadets, singing by Mme. Grace Hamlin and an extraordinary display of fireworks for a closing event made the program unusually inviting.

FOR A POPULAR CAUSE.

The cause was a popular one and the story of how this benefit came to be put on had made a hit with the public.

This is Rexall convention week in Boston for the United Drug Company. Thousands of delegates are here. President Louis K. Liggett of the United had arranged this carnival as a jollification for his company stockholders.

Mr. Liggett generously offered to stage the entertainment, put tickets on sale and donate the entire gate receipts to the soldiers' families. The result was a ready sale of tickets and the crowd that assembled at Braves Field tonight.

BURDENS OF B. & M. HEAVY

An answer was filed by the Boston & Maine Railroad this afternoon in the U. S. District Court to the petition for the appointment of a receiver for the road filed yesterday by Boyd B. Jones as counsel for one of the creditors, the Intercontinental Rubber Company of New York. George L. Mayberry entered his appearance for the Boston & Maine. The answer in brief form consents to receivership proceedings.

The bill asking for a receiver for the Boston & Maine Railroad, which was filed by Boyd B. Jones on behalf of the Intercontinental Rubber Company of New York, holders of a Boston & Maine note for $50,000, made its appearance in the United States District Court today.

Mr. Jones upon filing the bill late yesterday afternoon took it away with him in order to further amend it. Today a clerk from his office again filed the bill at the Federal Building.

The bill points out the danger of the road being unable to operate unless something is done at once. The bill says that the road has no ready cash on hand to take care of payments on interchange of freight with other roads. It says that $5,391,000 matures on or before January 1 upon contractual obligations.

It cites that during the past year all the real estate of the Boston & Maine in Massachusetts has been under attachment of $4,000,000 in a suit brought against the company by the Hampden Railroad Company, which

CHIEFS ARE SEEKING TIME

Washington, Aug. 23—The great financial interests behind the railroads of the country are now reaching a decision whether they will accept the demand of President Wilson tc agree to an eight-hour-work day at a ten-hour wage rate to prevent a general railroad strike.

While they are doing so, the railway presidents now here are sparring for time.

A definite decision hardly will be reached before Friday and may be deferred until early next week. But intimations reaching here from New York and Chicago make it plain that eventually President Wilson will secure recognition of the main points of his demand and the railroads will have laid the foundation for permanency in settling wage disputes.

DISCUSS PLAN AT CONFERENCE.

Following today's session of the sub-committee of the railway presidents, which has been authorized to arrange an agreement if possible, the following statement was issued:

"A meeting of the presidents and managers was held this morning and a recess taken until 6 o'clock.

"Chairman Holden stated that the report being circulated that any conclusion had been reached was incorrect."

Legislative means of meeting counter-suggestions by the railroads of the country were discussed by President Wilson today with Senator Newlands of Nevada and Representative Adamson of Georgia, chairmen of the Congressional interstate commerce committees.

On his way to the White House Representative Adamson, chairman of the committee, said:

"I don't know when this dispute will be settled, but I do know that if

INDIANS IN FINAL GAME

Fenway Park, Aug. 23—The final game of the Cleveland-Boston series, which is also the last game the Indians play in Boston this season, was staged this afternoon before a crowd of 3,500.

WILLEHAD REPORTED READY

In the past thirty-six hours the Willehad has been newly coaled, provisioned, headed with ice and manned with additional crew.

Representatives of the line have called this merely "conserving property." The idea of the Willehad going out of the harbor was ridiculed as exposing the steamer to instant capture by the British warship.

But harbor pilots raised the point that the Willehad could, with only seventeen feet draught, creep along the South Shore to Sandwich within the three-mile limit, negotiate the Cape Cod Canal,

RELIGIOUS PREJUDICE CHARGED

New York, Aug. 23. A sharp tilt developed at the opening meeting of the American Historical Association, Colonel Lafayette Young of Des Moines, chairman of the committee on public documents, charging that the activities of religious prejudice and fear of Roman Catholicism in the United States constituted the greatest menace to the country which is too easy to say from the present aspects of that proposition. The question of religious prejudice is the greatest before the American people today. It is even greater than the hyphenate question, and it concerns the entire American people."

DENIES TOLERATION.

Colonel Callahan went on to say that he congratulated the non-Catholic people on their toleration and consideration. When he had finished Mr. Brennan leaped to his feet and after some difficulty made himself heard.

"It is nothing short of silly to make such a remark that the five-sixths of the population that is non-Catholic is fair to us," he shouted.

"It is nothing and nothing more. The Catholics cannot thrive without a struggle, and I can speak with authority on conditions in Massachusetts. There the Catholics give $4,000,000 annually to the State, and what does the State give them? Nothing. Let us not be blind to the fact that there is prejudice against us Catholics."

"It is absurd to say anything else. The delegates elected all the officers recommended by the committee on elections, there being but one change from the old officials. J. F. Brennan of Boston was dropped as 49th vice-president, being succeeded by Peter Gland.

BRENNAN IS DROPPED.

The officers now are: President, John M. Vincent of New York; vice-presidents, Thomas P. Flynn of Chicago; second vice-president, J. A. Fisher of Kansas; Kenyon Minn., third vice-president; Joseph Frey of New York, fourth vice-president; Earl J. J. Hynes of Buffalo, fifth vice-president; Joseph McLaughlin of Philadelphia, sixth vice-president; Peter Kandy, secretary; Anthony Maire of Chicago; treasurer, C. H. Schulte of Detroit, marshal, Anthony Rahm of Victoria, Kansas.

Kansas City was unanimously chosen as the next convention city. The delegates adopted without a dissenting vote the recommendation of the organization committee to reorganize the federation. It was suggested that the constitution be reorganized and that the name be changed to the Catholic Federation of the United States. The reorganization plans must be approved by the bishops of the country before they can be effective, but it is said that most of them already approve the suggestion.

Dr. Peter E. Dietz of St. Louis appealed to the Federation to establish Catholic organizations for young men similar to the Y. M. C. A.

Many delegates left for home tonight, a contest existing for the election of officers at the meeting place. The movement of the Catholic Women's League to form an independent organization has received the support of Archbishop Sebastian Messmer of Milwaukee.

WOMEN'S HOLD MEETING.

It was announced that a meeting was held last night at which the archbishop presided and the following committee was appointed to take up the matter of forming a board in each section for the women: Miss Helen Hanner of Hanesdale, Pa.; Miss Mary A. Conboy of New York; Mrs. C. A. Walsh of Philadelphia; Miss Margaret Leech of Pittsburgh, Mrs. R. K. Wilson of Chicago, Mrs. Charles Cosgrain of Detroit; Mrs. Mary D. Hilton of Los Angeles and Miss C. Germerhausen.

"I have always been in favor of a separate federation for Catholic women," said Archbishop Messmer. "But as they are now united with the Federation of Societies, they can form a separate section."

Of the 300 women delegates, about thirty attended the meeting. The separationists are to form a plan which will be submitted to the executive board of the federation.

If it is approved it will be taken up at the annual convention.

Hurley, Cardinal O'Connell of Boston and some ladies, with Rev. Joseph Dinneen, vice-president of South Boston, and Dr. Lyle L. Slattery, who had accompanied him on the trip, left Reno Monday at 2 P. M. Splaine, the archbishop's secretary, who heads the Boston delegation, and Frederick W. Mayfield, Miss L. E. Slattery, two ladies and a newspaper man remained in the west to speak in the world and guide the destinies of the Massachusetts propositions, which are before the convention.

It is now definitely assured that the Boston idea of organization will be accepted and followed by the organization. Tomorrow there will be introduced a change in the bylaws and constitution of the organization, so that the executive committee will be cut down to twenty-one, and after that which has been listed in the Boston diocese

AIDES GLAD TO SEE HUGHES MOVE EAST

Reno, Nev., Aug. 23.—Charles Evans Hughes and his official party came to Nevada today after an extended sojourn in California. The candidate arrived here at 8:25 o'clock after a three-some nine-hour trip from Sacramento, where he spoke last night.

It was with a feeling of genuine relief that Mr. Hughes' trip managers saw him safely out of California. The Progressive situation is so delicate there and the factional lines so bitterly drawn that it was a case of "watch your step" at every stop.

Mr. Hughes will make the usual speeches here today. He will also confer with Nevada Republican leaders. Tonight he leaves for Ogden, Utah, where he will spend tomorrow. Mr. Hughes left California without having met Governor Johnson.

JOHNSON PIQUED?

Every effort to bring about a meeting between the two proved futile in political circles the failure of the two to meet is regarded as ominous, particularly in view of the fact that Chester Rowell, Progressive member of the Republican National Committee, pointedly absented himself from a meeting which Hughes addressed at Fresno, Lowell's home.

Progressives had declared that a meeting between Johnson and Hughes was essential to satisfy the demands of California Progressives for recognition.

It is the belief in political circles that Johnson is piqued because of the favor Hughes has shown his Johnson's enemies in the State, and that Progressive dissidents will react upon the situation throughout the country.

At Sacramento, Johnson's birthplace and stronghold, Hughes was received by a large crowd which was cordial in its reception of him.

Hughes' Tour Failure, Says McCormick.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—Radiating enthusiasm over Democratic prospects, Vance McCormick, campaign manager, came to Chicago today for a series of conferences with Middle West leaders.

"The Hughes tour," McCormick said, "has been a complete failure. He has flattened out. He started out strong but has grown steadily weaker.

"He is trying to play a fifty-fifty proposition to please Crane, Penrose and Smoot of his steering committee on the one hand and the Progressive members of his campaign committee on the other. He cannot enthuse one element without offending the other. He has not developed a single issue so far. He's been the biggest help we Democrats could have had."

McCormick said President Wilson would make no campaign tour, but would accept isolated invitations of non-political organizations.

E. H. GARY MEETS CHINA PRESIDENT

Pekin, China, Aug. 23.—Elbert H. Gary of New York, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation, has arrived in Pekin from Manila. He was presented to President Li Yuan-Hung by the American Minister, Dr. Paul Reinsch. Mr. Gary will go to Japan today.

WAKEFIELD WANTS TO CLEAN UP LAKE

The possibility of an epidemic lurking in the green scum on the surface of Lake Quannapowitt, Wakefield's pleasure park, has aroused the citizens of that town to action, and a meeting of all citizens who are interested in removing the unsightly and unhealthy condition will be held at the town hall tonight.

Work of putting up the walls of the Billy Sunday Tabernacle, to be made of tile blocks, was begun today on the old baseball grounds, Huntington avenue. About 45,000 blocks will be used.

The steel columns have been bolted to the wood, and many of them were also put in place. There will be about 175 columns and 20,000 bolts used in getting them ready.

Only thirty men were at work on the tabernacle today, but this number will be increased to about fifty.

"We're making good progress in every line of the work. The steel columns will not take very long to get into place. We've had good weather.

"Talk about the good fortune that we've had in building this tabernacle there's nothing like it. It has not rained one day since we first broke ground. That's going some, isn't it?

"This tabernacle will be the finest tabernacle ever erected for this movement.

"There is great interest felt by the men who are working on the job. They are putting in their best."

The cafeteria, which will be run by James A. Floyd, will be 112 by fifty-eight feet.

Mr. Floyd said: "The best food will be served at popular prices. We intend to have a cafeteria, which will appeal to all the people. I have been asked about the food to be served and whether I am going to serve pork and beans. I want to say now that pork and beans will be one of the chief dishes with chicken croquettes as a chaser."

Swordfish Must Stop Making Holes in This Schooner

Jack O'Brien, fisherman on the Boston schooner Helta, is much injured in his pocketbook. He was stabbed through the suitcase by a swordfish.

Captain Frank Lyon of the schooner is injured in his pocketbook because this is the second time in a few weeks that a swordfish's sword has been thrust up through the three-inch planking of the Helta hull.

"These swordfish gotta quit stickin' my boat around," says the skipper.

A few weeks ago a harpooned swordfish ran his sword up through the hull. The sword broke off short. It remained in the hole but started a leak. When the Helta came into port it was necessary to run it up on the marine railway, punch the sword out and close the hole. The Helta set out to sea.

Today the schooner returned to the Fish Wharf with swordfish, but no report of anything unusual. Jack O'Brien secured shore leave, went down in the forehold and started to pull his canvas extension bag out from under his bunk.

The bag stuck. Jack tugged and grunted. The bag wouldn't come.

Jack hoisted a match and investigated. He finally found that a swordfish's sword was stuck up through the bag and the extension bag from underneath, with the tip projecting above the top of the case.

Now they must run the Helta up the marine railway again and dig out this second sword.

Court Holds Man on Death Charge at Bar Harbor

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 23.—Guy Small of Otter Creek was arraigned before Judge Elliott N. Benson in the local court today on a charge of murder in having, Mrs. Emma Turnbull, the widow whose body, with the skull crushed, was found beside a path leading to her home three weeks ago.

Small pleaded not guilty and was held without bail for the continued hearing Thursday, August 24.

REXALL MEN IN BUSINESS SESSION

Delegates to the annual Rexall convention gathered today in Symphony Hall for the third business session.

While the men were in session the women journeyed by trolley to Harvard and Radcliffe colleges and other points of interest.

At 1 o'clock both the men and the women gathered at the new United Drug Company laboratory for luncheon. After luncheon there was an inspection of the laboratory and home office. Scores of guides showed the visitors through the big building.

Following the inspection of the building the delegates and the women guests took a trolley trip through the North End district, which will include an inspection of the Liggett candy factory.

CO-OPERATION IS URGED.

"Seventy per cent. of the perfume business comes from women," said E. W. Bartram, one of the day's speakers. He is sales manager of the perfume department.

"There is more than $50,000,000 spent in the United States every year for this kind of merchandise and 70 per cent. of this is purchased at the drug store," continued Mr. Bartram.

"More talcum powder is being used than ever before and men are beginning to use toilet articles to a great extent.

"Thrive and one-quarter million jars of cold cream were used last year in the United States and more than 150,000 complexion powder boxes."

John H. Mitchell of Maryville, Tenn., advocated co-operation and efficiency in his talk on "Making Candy Pay in the Small Country Town."

"We should have the spirit of co-operation in the selling of the Rexall product," he said. "We who are stockholders should know that our factories have the most up-to-date machinery and are run to turn out the very best candy. I sold myself in my little town more than 17,000 pounds of Rexall candy during the holidays."

LOOK FOR BIG INCREASE.

Horace A. Taylor of Louisville, Ky., asked for three and one-half million dollars worth of candy business for the coming year.

"We had last year an increase of $40,000 in our business," he said.

A. J. Neve of San Francisco told of the profit on stationery.

"We want more merchandise stunts that put money in the till, and greater interest in the stationery business will do it," he claimed.

Brunhes and the effect of war upon this commodity was outlined by R. T. Wilkerson, manager of this department.

"While about everything has advanced, the Rexall product has been well kept under. We have 100,000 orders ahead for brushes and are selling 9,000 brushes from Japan since France has been closed to business during the war," he said.

Charles R. Sherman of Omaha, Neb., told the men in the trade not to make their own perfumes, but have a variety of perfumes in their stores. "Always everything else but beautiful women in your store to preside over the perfume department," he urged.

Harry W. Taylor, manager of the candy department, spoke of the decrease of business in that commodity and gave an exhibition by means of the stereopticon of the different grades put forth by the Rexall company.

ENGLAND IS ATTACKED BY A. O. H.

Lowell, Aug. 23.—Resolutions condemnation of Roger Casement [illegible] by the [illegible] A. O. H. convention being in Lowell

Mrs. Katherine O'Keefe O'Mahoney presented the resolution, which was as follows:

[illegible]

[illegible] matter for [illegible] Casement [illegible] already protested at a previous board meeting, and through the [illegible] that [illegible] of sixteen [illegible] and they were at least given a soldier's death, refusing to Roger Casement, who was hanged."

TO TAKE SIMILAR ACTION.

It is expected that the men delegates at the convention will adopt similar resolutions.

John F. Donnelly of Cambridge, the state president, is not a candidate for re-election. Mr. Donnelly has an important position with the Cambridge city government and does not feel that he can devote the necessary time to the office another year.

The nominations for the office, the highest in the power of the delegates, are Patrick Boland, lawyer of South Boston, the present state secretary, and Patrick J. O'Dowd of Holyoke, the secretary of the organization.

Frederick J. McLaughlin of Jamaica Plain, judging from indications here today, will be returned a winner for the office of State treasurer. He has the solid backing of the Suffolk County delegates, and according to their story, is bound to win.

QUIT THE RACE.

A day or two ago, there were four candidates for the position. One, at least, has dropped out of the fight, which in the opinion of the delegates from Boston greatly increases McLaughlin's chance. McLaughlin is the president of the Suffolk County chapter, where he has made many friends during his tenure of office.

The women will have a merry fight there to-day before the election of their officers is determined.

The battle for the presidency lies between Miss Mary L. Malone of Norfolk and Mrs. Katherine Howard Griffin of Holyoke. Both candidates have their supporters and much hard work is being done by the campaign managers.

For the office of state secretary there is another contest arising in the subject of much good-natured rivalry. The candidates are Miss Mary A. Ryan and Mrs. Katherine O'Keefe O'Mahoney of Lawrence, who is a national figure in Irish affairs.

VICTORY SEEN AFAR BY LLOYD-GEORGE

London, Aug. 23.—David Lloyd-George, secretary of war, in the House of Commons said the criticisms of the British operations on the western front from Hall from the standpoint of failure to break through the German lines were unjustified. Lloyd-George said:

"The Somme offensive relieved the pressure on Verdun and prevented the enemy from pouring his forces into the Russian theatre to support the Austrians against General Brussiloff's thrust.

"I think in the dim distance we can see the end.

"France is equipped and Russia is [illegible] equipment has amazed her best friends. Germany has missed her chance and she knows it.

"It would be a mistake to underrate the nature of our task, with all of our responsibilities. But supposing the whole situation, and upon the advice of those more competent than myself, I express it as my opinion, I do not hesitate to say that what this country and the Allies have to do is to [illegible] gether steadily and work together loyally as they have done in the past to ensure that victory will rest on their banners.

FITZGERALD GETS FILM CHALLENGE

Former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald is challenged by E. A. Golden, manager of the Boston Photo Play Company, which is producing the film "Where Are My Children?" at the Majestic theatre, to appear on the Majestic stage at 12 15 Friday and tell what he knows about the film. Manager Golden takes exception to statements in the Republic. Mr. Fitzgerald, Aug. 9,000 brushes from Japan since [illegible] Golden, whether Mr. Fitzgerald accepts the challenge he will be asked [illegible] tions to determine according to Golden, whether Mr. Fitzgerald has actually seen the film. If Mr. Fitzgerald answers in the negative, a majority of perfumes in their stores "Shows everything else but beautiful women in your store to preside over the perfume department," he urged.

Harry W. Taylor, manager of the candy department, spoke of the decrease of business in that commodity and gave an exhibition by means of the stereopticon of the different grades put forth by the Rexall company.

WOMAN FIGHTS INHERITANCE TAX ORDER

Protesting against an order by the Norfolk Probate Court to pay to the [illegible] an inheritance tax on $6,450, left her in her employer's will, Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Young Wales of Needham has filed an appeal in the Supreme Court at Dedham.

Mrs. Wales was ordered to pay a [illegible] tax which she was demanded by the State tax commissioner. The court ruled on July 13 that a legacy payable to her by the will of Warren H. Hunt, for whom she was housekeeper, was subject to a tax on the theory that the Commonwealth sets at the rate of 5 per cent. with interest at 4 per cent from June 1, 1915. Miss Wales says that the money is owed by her, as stated in a clause in the will of Mr. Hunt, to the housekeeper as a reward for her duties to my satisfaction and I retain her in my service until my death, I give her [illegible] with a additional sum of $500 for each year she remained with the testator after he reached the age of eighty years, providing her work was satisfactory to her employer, to be paid to her by my executors."

Mrs. Wales has housekeeper, Mr. Hunt in his will said.

"If my housekeeper, Sarah Elizabeth Wales, now Mrs. Wales) continues to discharge here duties to my satisfaction and I retain her in my service until my death, I give her [illegible] with a additional sum of $500 for each year she remained with the testator after he reached the age of eighty years, providing her work was satisfactory to her employer, to be paid to her by my executors."

"If my housekeeper, Sarah Elizabeth Wales now Mrs. Wales) continues to discharge here duties to my satisfaction and I retain her in my service until my death, I give her [illegible] with a additional sum of $500 for each year she remained with the testator after he reached the age of eighty years, providing her work was satisfactory to her employer, to be paid to her by my executors."

GUARD COAST FROM ATTACK BY "REDS"

Washington, Aug. 23.—The Navy Department was in session with its [illegible] chiefs were in close touch with the [illegible] of operations. The big wireless plant across on the Virginia shores of the Potomac at Radio was sputtering like a short-circuited [illegible] transmitting apparatus.

Every agency of the naval branch of the government was working at feverish speed to aid Rear Admiral Helm and his "blue" defending fleet in the task of defending the Atlantic coast, with its powerful big guns, from theoretic attack by an enemy battle fleet [illegible] invading army which filled thirty transports.

The big war game began at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. The attacking fleet is commanded by Admiral Schley, chief of the Atlantic fleet. His force theoretically consists of scout and battle cruisers, dreadnoughts, destroyers and submarines, all convoying the big fleet of transports. He has until September 1 to make a landing on the Atlantic coast between Eastport, Me., and Cape Hatteras.

MUST PREVENT LANDING.

The task of Rear Admiral Helm, commanding the reserve fleet, is to prevent this landing. Theoretically, both forces have been given greatly augmented power and strength, but the defending squadron is at about the strength it would have when squadrons of the recently passed naval bill are effective.

The Navy Department has instituted in connection with the manoeuvres a system of wireless movements similar to that which would prevail in war time. The reason assigned was "rather obvious."

"If the newspapers published the whereabouts of our ships," the officials said, "and such papers were carried out on a merchant vessel, as it would be on one, it would be very easy for the attacking squadron to hold up such a ship and by merely [illegible] to learn the exact disposition. Nothing [illegible] such can be permitted."

CIVILIANS ON DUTY.

The twelve battleships of Admiral Helm's reserve fleet are manned in part by civilians who are getting naval training, or ex-naval militiamen. Ahead of the main fleet is a force of fast destroyers and cruisers commanded by Rear Admiral Usborne.

The "red," or attacking fleet, was, when the war began, 500 miles directly east of Cape Hatteras. The rules of the game provide that the manoeuvres shall take place within a square of [illegible] miles. The [illegible] fleet is more speedy than that of Admiral Helm's and the problem of the latter is serious.

WHAT wonder that Dorothy McRay suffered tortures of horror when she found her beloved standing, knife in hand, over her father! Could Jimmy and I glanced at each other instinctively. There was more to this story than even his newspaper instinct had led him to surmise. We knew now that we must wait and hear all the girl had to tell us.

I sat on the couch by her side and held her poor little cold hand while she sobbed out the tragedy that was torturing her so. She had lost at once the father she loved and all faith in the man who was to have been her husband.

"It's only circumstantial evidence, dear—perhaps he didn't do it," I said weakly enough. For I, too, was sharing Dorothy's tortured suspicions that the man she loved was a murderer. "Can you go on, dear? It may help us to help you," I said.

"Yes. I'll go on—in a minute—well, after Don said that he just glared at father for a moment, and then he rushed out of the room. Father was so angry that I couldn't face him, so I came up to my room. I was miserably unhappy, for I felt father never would let me marry Don, and it didn't seem as if I could give him up.

She Thinks of Beatrice

"I didn't know what to do. Then I saw the Evening Journal lying on my table and I thought of you. I knew girls you had helped, and I thought perhaps you'd be willing to help me. I sat and looked at the paper a long time first—and then I wrote. Oh, I'm glad I wrote—you will help me, won't you, Miss Fairfax? I can't bear it alone. Father dead and now Don a murderer. It's too awful."

The sudden Jimmy stepped forward—debonnaire, smiling Jimmy, whose friendly grin caught the attention even of this frightened girl.

One question more, Miss McRay. How does Jordan happen to be here? If you can give us a good reason for that I think I may be able to prove that he isn't a murderer."

I turned and stared at Jimmy. He seemed to be promising a good deal more than there was any logical reason to suppose he could perform. But Dorothy McRay smiled back at him through her tears—her story almost [illegible]

I had mailed my letter [illegible] the phone rang. I went down in the hall, so I [illegible] it was Don. He told me he never would consent to our marriage, but that once we were married there was nothing he could do about it.

They Plan to Elope

"Don begged me to elope with him, and I decided to do it this very evening—while my courage held out. I had my suitcase all packed and the night lock on the door thrown off, so Don could come in and get me.

So, that's how he happened to be in the house tonight. He came for you—not to harm your father," said Jimmy.

But afterward when we were on our way to follow his clew—the forlorn hope that we would find something to help us in the empty house into which he had seen the East Indian turn that afternoon—Jimmy confessed to me that the only logical way out was to feel that McRay had tried to interfere with Jordan when the boy came for Dorothy and that the desperate young lover had killed the man in a burst of passion.

But to Dorothy Jimmy made no such confession. He managed to calm her and then he and I rushed off to follow the instinct which made Jimmy feel that that mysterious interview between Prince Ali and his follower had a definite connection with the murder of Christopher McRay.

It was a forlorn enough hope we were pursuing—this theory that the empty house into which the Indian had vanished that afternoon was a meeting place for some of his sect! We were acting on the belief that the half heard address he whispered to the Prince had indeed been No. 220 Pelham road.

There was a priest making his devotions to the image of Buddha as the captain entered to try to purchase the idol

And above all there was the wildly desperate supposition that Prince Ali Jaibel of Calcutta and Christopher McRay, erstwhile officer in the English army, had met before, and that their lives were in some strange way interwoven.

A Weird Story

• • • Now I must ask my readers to come back with me and listen to a story which came to us later on from strange sources. There was indeed a reason why Prince Ali of Calcutta had traveled across the ocean to seek out McRay.

If Jimmy had followed the mysterious stranger who had been admitted to Ali's presence into that gloomy house to which we were bound, it is just possible that the story I narrate might be far different. But those who know the East, with its fatality, its superstition, its implacable desire to avenge its gods, tell me that Christopher McRay's doom was written in the Book of Fate twenty-five years before.

The East Indian hurried up to an unfurnished room on the floor of which a group of his compatriots were sitting smoking and quietly discussing the plans to which the unswerving patience of their pitiless faith had bound them. Philosophy is cold—the East is philosophical!

The was their watchword. "Buddha will be avenged tonight! What Stara Ali, Rajo Jaibel of Calcutta, seeks shall be ours again. Buddha will be avenged."

A Strange Existence

Twenty-five years before a young officer of the British army in India married a beautiful young girl who came out from home to be his bride. The daredevil of the British cavalry adored the lovely young creature who had come to him at the forsaken jungle post where he was stationed.

There was nothing in all the world he was not ready to win for her and lay as tribute at her feet. A man's best could never be too good for her—for had she not given him the most precious gift in all the world—herself?

The girl found life in the little station where her young husband was in command of a troop of cavalry humdrum enough except as she interested herself in all the strange phases of East Indian life.

The ragged beggars, the praying priests who seemed little different from the beggars, the shy-eyed young mothers, and the high caste Brahmins who tended the temples all seemed to her to be parts of a wonderful and strange panorama unroll ng before her eyes.

One day the young captain took her to view the idols of a queer little stone temple which existed her curiosity. It was a stone walled room with a stone altar at the rear. On this altar stood a squat figure about ten inches high. It was an image of Buddha carved out of flawless black marble.

A Simple Desire

The captain's young bride glowed with pleasure when her eyes fell on the exquisitely carved figure. It became the desire of her heart and she begged her husband to buy it for her. At once he determined to get it, since here was a chance to give his beloved some definite proof of his longing to lay the riches of the world at her feet!

There was a young priest kneeling before the altar. The captain offered him all the money he had brought with him, never doubting that the cupidity of the East would put the Buddha at once in his possession. But the priest drew back in horror and ordered them angrily from the temple.

The girl cried a little bit—the heat, the loneliness and the disappointment made her petulant.

The husband could not bear her tears—he determined that what could not be purchased could be taken; but first he would make one more effort to buy the idol. That night he visited the stone temple again. It lay in grim shadow—lighted only by dripping candles. The same young priest was tending the altar.

The Climax

The captain entered and went to his side. But now anger met the demands of the "cursed Englishman," who even in conquest scorned an alien to the East Indian. The priest was young and hot blooded. He drew a knife and threatened the captain.

Then the hot blooded young Englishman tore his revolver from its holster in self-defence and in attempting to strike the knife from the priest's hand he brought down the heavy butt on the Indian's head. The priest fell senseless before the altar of Buddha.

For a moment fright held the Englishman chained to the spot. Then the knowledge of how he had offended the priest caste terrified him for a moment and he started to make his escape. But there was a dare-devil streak in his blood.

He had offended—and to no purpose. His bride's happiness was no nearer. Her desire was still unfulfilled and her husband, in striking one Brahmin before the altar of his gods, had won the hatred of the whole Brahmin caste.

The young captain stooped over the senseless body of the priest and seized the squat black figure of Buddha. In the flickering light he almost fancied that it looked at him with an evil grin.

The Mysteries of Mecca

Such expressions as "The Mecca of the Hopes" are so common in our language that a few facts about the history of Mohammedanism may be interesting. Sir Rennell Rodd recently threw off this epigram to a friend:

In 1853, however, Sir Richard Burton, the famous Orientalist scholar and traveller, after spending several years in visiting the principal Arabic shrines, was the only one of the pilgrims, penetrated to Mecca in disguise.

He found it a filthy place, ruled by about 5,000 fanatics, the majority of them steeped in vice. And as it was then, so it is to a great extent today.

The Kaaba, in which the fetish stone is housed, is itself enclosed in an immense open-air mosque capable of holding 35,000 worshippers. Their Married Life

Warren Receives a Lesson in Honesty

Copyright, 1916, International News Service.

"Well, what do you know about that?" said Warren as they left the station; "that man in there gave me too much change."

Helen looked at him inquiringly. "He did? Well, don't you think you ought to go back with it?"

"Go back with it; what do you mean?"

"Well it certainly doesn't belong to you."

"Sure it does; it was given to me."

"Couldn't you think it wrong if anyone kept too much change if you had happened to be the one to suffer?"

"No; it would serve me right for being careless."

"Of course you say that now; but if it really happened to you, the store would be on the other foot."

They walked along a few minutes in silence. Helen was thinking of the [illegible] Warren was apt to be more careless about small things than she was. Helen believed that it was to be honest about the smallest things. Hoping to finally [illegible] Warren, who spoke again:

"I don't you think it's best to have a big corporation suffer the loss of a bit of change than it is for me to lose out on it?" he asked.

"Certainly I don't. Besides, it's not the corporation that loses. That [illegible] who is careless in making [illegible] will probably have to make it good."

"Oh, nonsense, you always make a thing worse than it is. That small amount will never be noticed."

All the more reason then why you ought to return it."

Helen was determined not to lose her point, and she persisted in upholding her end of the argument. Warren always held out against her in things of this kind. She remembered the day she had argued with him about giving charity to needy people. Nine-tenths of the men were the same. They all believed that in cheating a corporation they were somehow avenging themselves on an unjust world.

"Seriously, Warren," Helen said, after a minute or two of thought, "don't you think at all about the principle of the thing? Remember it's not the single incident that is so important in itself, it's the thing it stands for. Why you have simply stooped to petty stealing, and if you think it over you can't help but agree with me."

"Do you mean to say that I'm a thief?"

HELEN PRESSES THE POINT

"It amounts to that. You were given something by mistake that doesn't belong to you, but to someone else, and you are keeping it under false pretenses."

"I suppose you would call it exactly the same thing, if I should break into a bank and steal fifty thousand dollars."

"It's the same principle."

"That's the craziest thing you've said yet. Now I know you're dead wrong."

Helen shook her head, but said nothing more. Warren was either determined not to give in, and she was as equally determined, or else he was ashamed to confess that he was wrong. Helen felt that she wouldn't mind so much if he would confess himself wrong, but, being [illegible] ciple, then she [illegible] would not occur again, Warren would [illegible] ing again, and she turned [illegible] to hear what he [illegible] says:

"I suppose you would be perfectly willing to have me make a fool of myself and go back with a few pickets like a [illegible] and say: 'You gave me the wrong change'."

"Warren, what is the use of arguing in a circle about it. If you think you are right, nothing I can say will make you change your mind, so why talk about it any longer?"

"Hungry?" Warren said gruffly, as they passed the little restaurant near their apartment.

"No, not a bit, that salad down at Bobbie's was too filling. You don't mean to tell me that you are?"

"Not so very," Warren returned. "I have a hard day tomorrow. I hope it doesn't rain."

Helen was sitting before her dressing table fifteen minutes later, leisurely brushing her hair, when Warren called to her from the living room.

"Say, Helen, do you know where my snake ring is? See if it's anywhere around, will you?"

"You had it on this morning at breakfast," Helen called back.

"Are you sure?"

"Positive. I remember it when I poured the second cup of coffee for you. Have you lost it?"

"Oh, I guess I mislaid it, but I don't like to think of it lying down in the office all night."

THE RING IS LOST

Warren's snake ring was one of the few things that he was fond of. It was a queer antique thing, very heavy and unusually handsome. It was the only piece of jewelry that Warren wore, but he was very fond of it, and Helen knew he wouldn't lose it for words.

"You didn't leave it in the bathroom, did you?" she said getting up and going into the living room. "Shall I look?"

"No, I seem to remember leaving it down at the office the afternoon when I washed my hands. I hate to go down there tonight, and yet if I thought it worth while I would. I certainly wouldn't lose the thing."

"I wouldn't go down tonight if I were you," Helen said lightly. "It will probably be there when you get down in the morning."

"Well," Warren vouchsafed, "it would be funny now, if it should be gone, coming right on top of the change I kept."

"It would be funny, "Helen answered, looking him steadily in the eye. "I hope you find it, dear, but you know that old saying about a fair exchange is no robbery."

"Nonsense," said Warren turning away angrily, and Helen wondered just how deeply the significance struck him.

In Our Wonderful World

Indian swordsmen are acknowledged to be unrivalled. An extraordinary performer, who was a sergeant in one of the native regiments, is thus spoken of in Colonel Harris' book, "India and Her Hunting": "He was a fine-looking fellow, in the prime of life, and, notwithstanding the frightfully critical nature of what he was going to do, he moved about with perfect ease and calmness. In one hand he held a very long double-edged sword, sharp at the point and with edges like razors. With the other hand he led his little son, a child aged about six years, who was also clearly accustomed to what was about to follow.

"From the little fellow's evident enjoyment of the scene it was plain that failure on the part of his father was quite beyond the limits of his imagination. As soon as the usual preliminaries had been gone through, such as walking round and all arms to the commanding officer and principal guests, the father placed the little boy in the centre of a circle with a small lime about twice the size of a tennis ball under his heel.

"Then, taking up his stand at a few feet from the child he grasped firmly the hilt of the sword and began brandishing it rapidly in the air. The blade was thin and finely tempered, so that it could be seen to quiver and undulate throughout its entire length as it flashed in the rays of the setting sun. Suddenly the muscles of the athlete might be seen to stiffen themselves. An instant's pause, then a sudden and lightning-like swoop, and the lime under the boy's heel was safely severed.

"Then, the boy having taken up his position as before, a small open box, about the size of those we use for tooth powder, was placed on the ground at his feet. It was filled with a black powder called aconine, used by the natives for darkening eyelashes. Round this little box and about the boy's head the sword was now made to play with redoubled velocity. In the midst of the most dazzling passes the weapon would dart towards the little box, and then reappear, steadily poised at the full stretch of the performer's arm, in front of the eyes of the child; then a sudden turn of the wrist, and a very dark line of powder was [illegible] on one of the boy's lower eyelashes, placed there by the sharp point of the long sword. The aime was then done to the other eye. This feat was performed weekly, always with undeviating success, and was the most wonderful instance of nerve and steadiness ever witnessed."

PROMOTION OF LIEUTENANT IS CRITICIZED

By BERT FORD.

Second Brigade Headquarters, El Paso, Tex., Aug. 23.—Dissatisfaction continues to be expressed in the medical corps of the Massachusetts organizations camped on the border, because of the appointment of Lieutenant Charles R. Morgan as major of the two ambulance companies.

Criticism is not directed against Major Morgan so much as it is against Surgeon-General Frank P. Williams, who is accused of playing politics in placing Morgan above Captain George F. Keenan, commander of the original company and the only ambulance company from Massachusetts on the border.

Major Morgan's meteoric rise is cited as a glaring example of the elements that undermine the National Guard. Medicos say that without considering personalities, Captain Keenan was entitled to promotion and that Morgan might have been well satisfied to be made captain.

WITH MILITIA 20 YEARS.

It appears to be the concensus of opinion that Captain Keenan was the logical choice for advancement because of seniority and service. Captain Keenan is a West End boy and the son of "Tom" Keenan, a veteran Boston newspaper man. He is a prominent Boston surgeon.

Although a young man, he has been identified with the militia twenty years and is one of the few medical experts with a line of experience which makes him doubly valuable.

When the first ambulance company was wavering, Captain Keenan was asked by Surgeon-General Williams to whip it together and he did by hard work. Today it is the foremost ambulance outfit in the National Guard of the country. Captain Keenan's outfit has the record for the longest road marches and has exhibited on various occasions, notably on the Common, prior to the militia parade last Fall and the preparedness parade.

Captain Keenan handled his men and equipment with such dispatch that they were the first Bay State unit to reach the Mexican border, although they started after other organizations. The ambulance company camp at Pershing has been pronounced a model and Captain Keenan and his staff, Captain Leonard W. Hassett of Lynn, Captain Marcus D. Bryant of Lowell, and Lieutenant David L. Williams and Lieutenant Frederick W. O'Brien of Boston have taken an active part in medical work at Fort Bliss and in camp duties. Lieutenant O'Brien has given regular army surgeons instructions in X-ray work at the base hospital.

APPOINTMENT IS ATTACKED.

Captain Keenan has declined to discuss Major Morgan's appointment, but his sympathizers in the militia camps are expressing themselves vigorously on the matter. They say it is poor reward for Captain Keenan who has given so much of his time and energy to the cause.

Major Morgan is stationed with his new ambulance company at Framingham. He was a lieutenant about five years and had a short term of hospital service in the navy. During the week of concentration at Framingham he was excused for illness and the next news received from him after the forces reached the border told of his promotion.

Battery B of the Massachusetts Artillery went on its first field practice and slept last night under pup tents at Ysleta, eight miles from Pershing. Captain John F. J. Herbert of Worcester received peremptory orders and men and equipment were under way in an hour and twenty minutes. Lieutenant-Colonel Davis was thrown from the basket of a motorcycle in his haste to reach the scene of entrenchment, but received nothing more serious than a mud bath.

He found Captain Herbert's batteries skilfully concealed and in effective positions to conduct the theoretical shelling of San Jose, a nearby village. Another battery will go out today and wage a sham battle with B Battery. The men enjoyed the departure from camp life.

Major Frank S. Elliott, who resigned from the Eighth Regiment because of business reasons, was given a farewell dinner in the Officers' Club. His business partner, Lieutenant-Colonel William H. Ferry, has just returned from a thirty-day furlough granted to permit him to straighten out their printing business until Major Elliott's return to Boston.

BERTH FOR LIEUTENANT M'DADE.

Lieutenant William A. McDade has been attached to the quartermaster's department, selecting camp sites. Lieutenant Carl H. Tobey, M company of the Eighth, living at No. 7 Vinal avenue, has started for Boston on a thirty-day furlough, owing to illness of a member of his family.

Chaplain H. Boyd Edwards of the Eighth arranged with a local bank to borrow $15,000 at 6 per cent., if the government does not hurry and pay the regiment. A fresh consignment of cots will give each company eighteen more, but leaves scores shy. Captain Thomas A. Brown of A Company of the Eighth, an ordnance expert, has been detailed to Columbus, N. M., for ordnance duty.

PRICE OF BEANS GOING UP AGAIN

Chicago, Aug. 23.—A further advance in the price of beans is expected. A year ago beans cost the housewife five cents a pound; the retail price now is 11 cents a pound. The demand for beans for European armies and for United States troops along the border are said to be the principal causes for the advance in price.

Mr. Carnegie will leave on his yacht Thursday for a cruise along the coast of Nova Scotia.

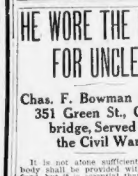
Chas. F. Bowman of No. 351 Green St., Cambridge, Served in the Civil War.



CHARLES F. BOWMAN.

It is not alone sufficient that the body shall be provided with suitable food, but it is essential that the food must be changed in form by active via the digestive organs before it provides energy for the human body. Without good digestion and assimilation there cannot be perfect health.

Plant Juice, the new herbal system tonic, corrects indigestion, strengthens the stomach, causing the gastric juices to flow freely, the food gets into the liver and kidneys, eliminate, urie and from the blood, which is the source of rheumatism, and the sufferer is restored to health, which is the heritage of good health.

Local testimonials from grateful users of Plant Juice continue to pour in, proving that the remedy will bring lasting relief to sufferers. One from Mr. Charles F. Bowman, who resides at No. 351 Green st., Cambridge, Mass., is especially convincing. Mr. Bowman was raised on the Old North Bridge, and is a member of the G. A. R., having served in the civil War in the U. S. Navy, and is a well-known man in Boston and Cambridge. He stated:

"I had suffered from stomach trouble and constipation for a number of years. After eating I would bloat up, causing gas bulging. I was subjected to headaches and dizzy spells. My head ached so that it would actually make me sick. I had tried a great many different remedies for my trouble, and the only medicine that has done me any good is Plant Juice. It has given me a good appetite, and I can eat what I want to now, and sleep fine. I certainly recommend Plant Juice to anyone; it is pleasant to take, and I find it does all you claim for it."

The Plant Juice man is at the Drug Department of the Houghton & Dutton Co.'s store, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

We Should Put an End to Interference with the Mails

THE purpose the British censorship has had in view while delaying, distorting, falsifying and most frequently destroying the messages and letters sent from Germany by neutral American newspaper correspondents is perfectly plain.

That purpose has been, from the beginning, to excite hostile feelings against Germany in America. And the purpose has been accomplished in great part, for the majority of American newspapers took the bait with a childish credulity that is certainly not complimentary to their thinking machinery, and American public opinion is always formed by newspapers.

The national harm resulting from this successful effort of the London Press Bureau and censorship is not yet apparent. But it is certain that we shall suffer much business loss after the war is over and have active and powerful diplomatic enemies in all our foreign relations, when there was no necessity at all for creating such enmity.

We have simply been made one of the catspaws with which it has always been England's custom to pull her own chestnuts out of the fire.

The most serious indictment against this British control of our cable and postal communications with central Europe is that it came within an ace of getting us into war with Germany and Austria by the most flagrant suppression or distortion or downright falsifying of cable and mail messages intended to pass between Germany and America.

We escaped that war only by the German Emperor using his authority and his unbounded personal popularity with the German people to maintain friendly relations.

Now, we submit that no belligerent Power has any right at all to interrupt or to falsify or to suppress cable or postal communications between the people of another belligerent country and the people of a neutral country.

We affirm that freedom of the mails is an integral and solemnly guaranteed part of the law of nations, and that in molesting, searching, distorting and destroying mails and dispatches en route between Germany and America the British Government violates a law of nations which its own representatives voted for in the conference at The Hague and it itself ratified with its own hand.

Plainly some remedy other than an international treaty must be found for this intolerable situation, since the British Government has no respect for treaties or pledges made to neutrals that interfere with its objects in war time.

There are two methods by which the American people can maintain free and unmolested mail and telegraph communication with Sweden, Norway, Holland, Denmark and central Europe.

One of these is to put our mails on board American warships and instruct the ships' commanders to permit no one to search or molest those mails while they are on the way to their destination.

That would have been Abraham Lincoln's or U. S. Grant's way.

The other way is to remove the unfair and unneutral restrictions and prohibitions put upon the wireless telegraph and permit messages of every kind to go and come as freely over the wireless as over the undersea cables.

The Hague conference made it optional with a neutral government whether it would permit the free and uncensored use of the wireless telegraph or not.

After the British had cut our cable communications with the Central Empires and taken control of our cable communications with friendly neutral countries, Mr. Wilson elected to put a stop to wireless communication, except through one plant—and that plant not allowed to send or receive any messages except under supervision of official censors.

We think this discrimination against the wireless telegraphs, while the cables under British control are free to work as they please, is unfair partisanship and unneutral conduct amounting in reality to a hostile act.

By this unfair advantage the English Government was enabled to present such a distorted and falsified continuous story of the war that even intelligent Americans, who ought to have had more common sense, were led to the most absurd and grotesque misconceptions.

For example, many Americans were induced to believe that the civilized and cultured peoples of Germany and Austria had suddenly become barbarous savages, while, by an even more astounding miracle, the ignorant, superstitious and half-savage moujiks and Cossacks of Russia had as suddenly been transformed into enlightened and charmingly soulful heroes, fighting unselfishly and desperately for the civilization and liberties of mankind!

A censorship and a corruption of news that can make intelligent Americans swallow such preposterous and palpable and impossible fiction as that is not good for our national interests, either at home or abroad, and should be abruptly ended, even if it should require force to end it.

THERE'S THE SHERIFF SITTING IN THE GLOUCESTER HAMMOCK WITH THE WIDOW! THAT'S THE LIMIT! I'LL GET HIM OUT OF THERE IN JIG TIME!
WHAT ARE YOU LOOKING AT, WILLIE?
OH, LOOK!
IS IT AN AIRSHIP?
WHERE IS IT?
MORNING, MR. WILLIE!
I DON'T SEE ANYTHING
OH, YOU'RE SUCH A JOKER!
THE SHERIFF IS AN AWFUL BOOB.
HA, HA, SHERIFF, THAT WAS A GOOD ONE ON YOU!
CHEER UP, SHERIFF! CHERRIES WILL BE RIPE SOON!
YOU JUST WAIT!

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

Golly! It's Hot!

WHEN a total stranger greets you with a disapproving sneer
And remarks that for a nickel he will bite you on the ear,
Don't take up his proposal nor return his savage stare,
Take a trolley or a taxi and depart away from there.
For in his uncouth demeanor you can very clearly see
That the weather's getting hott'er than it really ought to be.

WHEN your dear old Aunt Maria says, last evening, after dark,
She was bitten on the elbow by a hammer-headed shark,
Don't dispute her tragic story, but reply, "Yes, yes! No doubt!"
And as soon as it's convenient make excuses and go out.
And before you tell the neighbors the old lady has gone mad,
Just remember that the weather's 'bout the hottest we have had.

WHEN you hear a fat policeman say he's spent a pleasant hour
In instructing his pet grampus to jump off the Customs tower,
Don't ask to see the creature which performed this dashing feat,
But nod your head engagingly and walk off down the street.
For this curious narration ought to furnish you with proof
That the weather's fried the lining of the fat policeman's roof.

Learning a Lucrative Trade, Anyway

Even if the soldiers on the border are idle, they will be able to support themselves handsomely at the end of their terms of enlistment. Each individual is being taught to cook.

The Force of Curiosity

"Wilson Gets Up at 8 a. m. Every Day."—Headline. Probably so he can get the papers and find what the other candidate is saying about him.

A Grave Peril

Mr. Wilson will not be notified of his nomination till Congress adjourns, and if Congress doesn't adjourn at all the poor fellow may never discover that he is a candidate.

She Must Have Missed Something

Mr. Rockefeller says that in many instances when he had to decide between making money and being right he had to sacrifice the money. A careful study of Miss Ida Tarbell's biography fails to discover the details of any of these instances.

The Only Incentive

I fain would be utterly useless,
I fain would stand all the day idle
And loaf 'round at night with unclouded delight
Making rings on a bar with a quill.
I envy the birds and the bobees
Who spurn any fixed occupations;
I was born for a shirk, but I still stick at work—
For I'd just hate to die of starvation.

He Has Friends in Both Places

"Taft to Run for United States Senator in Connecticut." — Headline. He'd stand a better chance in Utah and Vermont.

It Won't Last

There is a $5,500,000 surplus in the postal revenues, but just wait till the mail-carrying railroads find out about it.

Business Is Business

Now that the British censors are taking checks out of letters from America, perhaps they can see the utility of letting the correspondents run up bigger space bills.

The Month of Sneezes

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects

CHANGES will never cease. Not only are we setting the clock ahead and making the sun officially rise at a civilized hour, but there is a new name proposed for the Dog Days, and that is "Rag Time." It isn't a dance, it's a chorus, or rather an antiphonal service—all hayfeverites sneezing in unison to the breezy rhythm of the pollen of the ragweed. The dog is to be deprived of his day because the official statistician of the American Hay Fever Association has calculated that 75,650,000 sneezes would be set off in August in the State of New York alone, which, if they all went off at once and in the same direction, would well-nigh equal in destructive power the Black Tom Island explosion.

Why should a noble army of martyrs three hundred thousand strong, scattered all over these United States, suddenly, as if at a preconcerted signal, with one accord, begin sneezing and gasping and running at the eyes on the first or second of August? At a season of year when the grip has ceased from troubling and all other noses and throats are at rest? The precision with which they conform to the calendar has something positively uncanny about it, and in an earlier day would unquestionably have been put down to witchcraft, and the paroxysms regarded as a form of demoniac possession. And the last might not be so far wrong, for its victims would cordially agree that whether it be a possession or not, "demoniac" fits it exactly. A veteran hayfeverite will often be able to tell you in advance precisely by the day of the month at whose dawn he will greet the rising sun with a salute of sneezes, or more frequently name the day which will be near the middle of the week in which he will begin sneezing. Then after making life "one grand, sweet sneeze" for three to six weeks the Tehee devil leaveth him almost as suddenly and with as little discoverable reason as it came.

For many years after its discovery this singular calendar-following habit of the disease was an utter puzzle and mystery, and theories of explanation were about equally divided between the idea of some mysterious celestial influence, some conjunction of the planets or position of the stars, or stoke of the moon, which precipitated the attack, or that of suggestion and expectancy. According to the latter theory, the victims of the malady having once begun sneezing on that date, or hearing that others invariably began on that date, set their mental alarm clock, so to speak, with such determination that they, too, blew up on the same fatal day.

But these explanations, like most supernatural and mental ones, were simply restatements of our ignorance in a more imposing form and didn't get us anywhere. Besides, instead of the victims of hay fever being unusually superstitious and impressible, as these theories would imply, they are distinctly the opposite. To have hay fever is regarded as a mark of biologic distinction, a sort of certificate of cerebral complexity and of high and sensitive nervous organization. Like all martyrs, the hayfeverites are rather proud of their sufferings and should be entitled to the honorary degree of B. S.—Bachelor of Sneezes.

At all events, they can claim the honorable distinction of being the only sufferers who themselves form associations to study their own disease, to encourage research and offer rewards for the discovery of a cure. These associations meet annually in the various Cities of Refuge and Absalom in all parts of the country, happy regions which are free from hay fever, and send delegates to the national association, which meets on the last day of August at Bethlehem, N. H., in the White Mountains. It is reported by the frivolously minded that when a delegate rises to take part in the discussions he sneezes twice, otherwise the Chair will not recognize him.

Neither of these miracles takes place. The man who failed to fascinate her when she saw him with company clothes and company manners on is not going to enthuse her when she has a steady dose of him in everyday attire and negligee conduct.

A Difficult Role

Nor, unless she is a wonder of her sex, can she always remember to be considerate, and kind, and forbearing, and patient, and agreeable to one who gets on her nerves, and toward whom her only sentiment is one of obligation and duty.

The plain unvarnished truth is that it takes a lot of love to enable anybody to endure matrimony, which may be a holy estate, but is certainly one full of trials and tribulations that tax both the flesh and the spirit to the utmost. There is no human being with whom we are brought into close contact but who necessarily makes large drafts upon our temper, our taste and our patience.

And this goes double when two people of the opposite sex, looking at life from opposite poles of temperament and training, are bound together in the narrow confines of domesticity, where neither has room in which to draw a single breath of personal liberty. Nothing but love enables any woman to stand the strain.

So the girl who is thinking of marrying should not ask herself if a suitor can give her this or that, or if he possesses certain graces and charms, but only if she loves him well enough to do without things for his sake, and to forgive him his crankiness and love him still.

Those Awful Times

There are times when every husband is cross, and unreasonable, and stingy, and mean; when he rows about little things, and criticizes his wife's people; when he refuses to go out with her and is otherwise pesky, and the only way this is bearable is for the wife to be so much in love that she blames his cantankerousness on his business and begs him not to work so hard.

It is far more important for a woman to be in love with a husband than it is for him to be in love with her, because love's spectacles are rose-colored, and while a woman looks through them she sees in a man just what she wants to see.

Girls Should Not Marry Unless They Love

If They Do, Says Dorothy Dix, They Will Be Miserable Ever After, Even If the Men They Wed Be Saints and Millionaires Combined.

By Dorothy Dix

A YOUNG girl asked my advice the other day about whether she should marry a certain man who had asked her to be his wife.

"Do you love him?" I inquired.

"No," she replied, "but he is a good man. He is comfortably rich, and my mother wants me to marry him."

"Well, then, let mother marry him," said I. "Don't you do it, for if you marry a man you don't love you will be miserable ever after, no matter if he is a saint and a millionaire combined."

A woman's affections are the medium through which she looks on life. If she does not love him her husband cannot please her, though he were a model of all the virtues.

If, on the other hand, she loves the man who shares it with her, she can be perfectly content in a two by four flat. She can prefer doing her own cooking to going to balls, and be blind as a bat at weaknesses at which all the world jeers.

For this reason no woman should ever marry unless she is wildly, frantically, madly in love. A man may marry a woman for whom he has only a mild and lukewarm regard and get along in reasonable comfort, because after marriage love is only a side issue with him, anyway.

The Masculine Code

Besides, the masculine code teaches a man not to welch, and when he makes a bad bargain to stick to it, so the indifferent husband is not infrequently a fairly comfortable one to live with.

But women are notoriously poor losers, and, no matter how deliberately they make it, when they find out that the marriage of convenience, or the marriage of ambition, or the marriage for money is a failure, they have no shame in squealing, as our sporting friends say, and thus it happens that the unloving wife is invariably a complaining and disagreeable one.

Now, no woman can live with a husband she does not love and be happy, and not one woman in a thousand has the strength of character to do her duty as a wife unless she is happy, or treat a man right not because she wants to but because she ought to.

Of course, the girl who marries a man for whom she has only a pale pink friendship deludes herself by thinking that her liking will warm up into hectic love after marriage and that she will make him a good wife whether she is fond of him or not.
